Test Grows Out Of Relatively Unimportant Suit For Levy Refund

COUNTRY-WIDE DISTRESS CITED AS NEED FOR STEP

Measure Defended In Opinion Written By Judge Samuel H. Sibley

NEW ORLEANS March 20 (AP)—The United States fifth circuit court of appeals today upheld constitutionality of the social security act specifically its taxing provisions.

The decision was unanimous in a three-judge tribunal composed of Senior Judge Robert E. Foster and Associate Judges Samuel H. Sibley and Edwin R. Holmes.

The judicial nod of approval for this important plank in the New Deal's social security program grew out of a petty suit involving a tax involving the payment of $46.14.

The Clark G. Stewart Machine company of Birmingham, Ala., paid the collector of internal revenue $46.14 in 1936 on the payroll with this tax of the social security act.

The company then sued Harwell G. Davis, the tax collector for the district of Alabama for a refund of the tax on the ground that it had been wrongfully and illegally assessed because the act of congress creating it is unconstitutional and void.

The company supported this charge that the social security act violated various state rights guaranteed by the constitution, that congress in laying that tax violated the ninth and tenth amendments of the constitution, that under it the property of employers was taken without just compensation, that taxes imposed under the social security act were not for purposes to support constitutional government purposes and that the act also violated article I, section 1 of the constitution by investing legislative authority in the social security board.

The district court of the United States for the eastern district of Alabama dismissed the company's suit for a refund and it was carried to the circuit court of appeals.

In upholding the lower court the opinion of the court of appeals written by Judge Sibley, said:

"For many years congress has recognized the complete public acquiescence in and approbation of such schemes of unemployment and pensioning as these though based upon the premise of the government to meet and control conditions affecting the general welfare of the United States touching which the power of tax and the cognative power to spend must be exercised. Hateful Income Tax Submission The Better Part Of Valor What The War Did Government Gentleman

WE HAVE NO quarrel with the government income tax.

The quarreling, if any, as far as we are concerned, is entirely on the government's side.

We do not say we like the income tax. As a matter of fact, we hate the income tax, though we hope and trust that Mr. Helvering does not hear that talk.

When March 15 rolls around and we pay our tithe, we get no hot feeling of patriotism out of it, as we think of all the things we could have done with that dough. In an election, such doubles are selling at $2 a throw, so it needs all his income has not.

But one person quickly cools. We long ago discovered that there is nothing we can do about it. Not a thing. We are quietly reconciled to the government income tax as we are to the weather.

You perhaps thought we were going to say death. Let us tell you right now, that we will never become reconciled to death. We think it most distasteful in all its aspects. We would dearly love to go on paying the government income tax for the next 100 years. We have a bet down that it is going to be heavier by then, and I want to see how we come out.

WE THINK there are disparities and injustices in the government in-

FORMER MONROE RESIDENT KILLED

Joe Hennick, 21, Fatally Injured When Automobile Overturns Near Minden

Joe Hennick, 21, former employee as bell boy at Hotel Frances but for the past few months employed by the Washington-Youree hotel at Shreveport, was instantly killed Saturday at 1:30 a.m. when the car in which he and five others were riding was overturned on a slight curve on the Minden road four miles east of State 4[illegible].

The party was returning from a night club at the time and all in the coupe were thrown from the machine as it rolled along a grassy bank a distance of about 75 feet before coming to a stop on a grassy spot west of the road. All the others in the car escaped [illegible] injuries, it was reported.

Young Hennick was the son of Joseph W. Hennick, a general contractor who formerly resided in Monroe but is now located at Bogalusa. He is survived by his parents and by two sisters, one living in Texas and the other in Vivian, and by his wife to whom he was recently married.

During his residence in Monroe, Hennick made many friends and was

GERMAN AVIATOR SUSPECTED AS SPY

BEZIERS, France, March 20 (AP)—In the arrest tonight of a mysterious German aviator [illegible] on an isolated country road in the south of France, French police believed they may have struck the trail of a highly organized spy ring.

Farmers near Beziers saw the pilot bring his plane down in a field beside the road and began to talk with the occupants of a waiting automobile who had been waiting to learn if he was still aloft.

The farmers called the gendarmes. Before they arrived however the talk evidently was completed. The automobile drove away rapidly. The pilot ran back to his plane, but the gendarmes seized him before he was able to re-start his motor. A police alarm was broadcast for the automobile, but late tonight it was still at large.

The aviator gave his name as Schumaker, admitted he was German, but refused to tell what he was doing in an out-of-the-way part of the French countryside or give the names of those in the motor car.

TRAIN HITS THREE WORKERS IN TUNNEL

BALTIMORE, March 20 (AP)—A Baltimore and Ohio railroad train struck three workmen in the tunnel at Mount Royal station today, killing a signalman and injuring the other two.

G. E. Clarke, the signalman, died instantly. The right leg of Edward Shreves, 51, signal foreman, was amputated below the knee. Clarence Brandenburg, assistant signalman, received cuts on the face.

Railroad officials said the crew working in the tunnel had been warned of the approaching train and all but the three had left.

PECORA FAVORS CHANGED COURT

Declares It Necessary To Save Country From Danger Of 'Dictatorship'

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—Judge Ferdinand Pecora of the New York supreme court declared before the senate judiciary committee today that the Roosevelt court revamping bill should be enacted to save the country from danger of "dictatorship."

His testimony, given in the same room in which he cross-examined J. P. Morgan four years ago as counsel for the senate banking committee, followed these other developments in the strenuous debate:

1. Senator Burke, Democrat, Nebraska, in a radio speech directed at farmers, condemned the presidential proposal as a "startling suggestion, the like of which no man ever before dared breathe in this country." He said the aim of the legislation was "to make reasonably sure that the court will never again dare to act as an independent tribunal of justice."

2. Irving Brant, St. Louis editorial writer, supported the Roosevelt proposal, telling the senate committee that "you cannot allow five men in majority of the supreme court to set themselves up in irresponsible aloofness and rule 125,000,000 people by judicial fiat."

3. Brant, member of the staff of the St. Louis Star-Times, tangled with Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, an opponent of the bill.

Angrily, Brant said Connally's manner of questioning witnesses was a "disgrace" to the committee. Connally in turn accused the writer of "taking advantage of a public forum to deliberately insult senators."

4. Representative Pettengill, Democrat, Indiana, opposing the presidential legislation on the radio tonight, declared judges must be protected from "political pressure" so that rights of racial, religious, social and political minorities may be assured.

5. Rep. Flannagan, Democrat, Virginia, an advocate of the bill, criticized Supreme Court Justice McReynolds, who recently contended that the sporting thing to do was to accept the verdict of the tribunal. Flannagan said "this is the first time I ever heard the man who is battling to keep the score straight being accused of lack of sportsmanship."

Pecora urged the Roosevelt bill as a measure "to preserve the courts."

"If we continue to acquiesce in tortured constructions of the constitution, which deny to our democracy the essential powers of free government, the courts will ultimately prove unable, howsoever willing, to protect human liberty from the dangers and oppressions of dictatorship," he said.

Labor unrest he said, is causing national concern, and labor is demanding "increased recognition" in law.

"Past decisions of the supreme court have long denied the right of both federal and state governments to prevent discrimination against union labor. Indifference to labor's demands may lead labor in self-defense to follow the example of law-defiance so skillfully practiced by the economically powerful.

"When a Liberty league lawyer advises his clients to disregard acts of congress, it is not to be wondered at that over-zealous advocates counsel strikers to disregard court orders.

"Never forget that sit-down strikes in defiance of law originated in the lofty seats of high finance."

He charged that great financial interests had engaged in a sit-down strike against the government, withholding investment funds until the securities act of 1933 was amended.

Utility companies he charged engaged in such a strike against the utility holding company act, and he asserted that a third strike has been directed at the Wagner labor relations act.

FLIGHT INTENDED

Her navigators, Captain Harry Manning and Fred J. Noonan, crawled out and surveyed the broken ship.

There was a tremor in her voice but she showed no outward effects of the ordeal save her paleness and the loss of a paper lei which hung about her neck as she started down the runway.

A few hours later Miss Earhart, Manning, Noonan and Mantz sailed for Los Angeles on the steamer Matsolo, determined to have their plane repaired at its southern California factory preparatory to resuming the projected 27,000 mile world flight.

She seemed bedraggled and tired as she hurried up the gangplank to sail. Her chin went up, however, as the liner moved out to the strains of the inevitable "Aloha Oe."

"I'll be back," she said.

"I hope this is only a postponement. I talked with Mr. Putnam (George Palmer Putnam, her husband, in Oakland) and he was happy to hear our voices. He said as long as we were safe, nothing else mattered."

She said the plane would be crated and shipped back to its (Lockheed) factory in Los Angeles as soon as possible—probably next week.

Before sailing Miss Earhart conferred with postal officials regarding several thousand special stamp cachets she was to have carried around the world. They were held for further instructions.

Brigadier General Barton K. Yount of the army air force asserted the field, with concrete runways, was in good condition. He said the blowout was the cause of the crash.

Other aviation experts expressed the belief that the heavy load of gasoline washing back and forth in the tanks set the plane to swaying and forced it beyond control. The tanks have a capacity of 1,151 gallons but contained only between 800 and 900.

The general added that Miss Earhart's tires had been carefully "checked" ten minutes before take-off time.

Miss Earhart's lightning-like maneuver of the throttles and ignition switches apparently prevented an explosion and a fire which would have trapped her and her navigators in an inferno, even the ground about the plane was drenched with gasoline.

"It's merely a postponement of the world trip but not cancellation," she said.

An inspection of the plane yesterday revealed the propeller bearings of her plane were almost dry when she spun into Honolulu the day before to finish a 2,400-mile dash from Oakland in the record time of 15 hours, 51 1-2 minutes.

Wilbur Thomas, motors expert, said the condition might have forced her down between here and Howland Island if not soon discovered.

radiators in public buildings. When you put in 72 such radiators, you have 72 chances for individual explosions."

Jesse P. Vaughan, an oil field worker, told the court he and a companion who previously had expressed an opinion the explosion was caused by nitroglycerin had changed their minds.

From Contractor Ross Maddox, who had a part in building the school, the court heard original plans for heating the oil-wealthy school from a steam boiler were changed to provide individual gas steam radiators "on account of cost, I presume."

Dr. E. P. Schoch, explosions expert from the University of Texas, questioned Belew, representing James B. Clow and Sons company.

Dr. Schoch, who earlier expressed a theory that an accumulation of gas caused the blast, asked Belew if he had told officials of the regulator fault. The salesman replied:

"I told Mr. Shaw (W. C. Shaw, school superintendent) that it was dangerous. I told him he would have to reduce the pressure."

Belew testified a new gas regulator was installed in the main buildings some time after January 1 and a change from dry gas to wet gas was made. He said he told school officials the regulator would not hold the increased pressure following the change.

Scores of the victims of the nation's greatest child disaster were lowered into graves as the inquiry court sat in a rambling wooden structure only 50 yards from the demolished schoolhouse.

Captain Zachariah Coombes of the Texas national guard sat as judge advocate and closely questioned witnesses who told of construction of the building and heating system, believed by at least one expert to have caused the explosion that turned the pretentious school house into a wreckage of horror.

Contractor Ross Maddox, called to testify concerning the heating system, told the court original plans for building did not call for a gas heating system, but for a boiler.

"The change to gas steam radiation was on account of cost, I presume," he said.

The contractor said the London school building committee carefully inspected various gas heating devices in other east Texas schools before deciding to install one in its structure.

No state agency passed on the installation of the radiator system, said Maddox, but he added "it was done according to the code with no formal inspection."

Efforts to strengthen theories that gas accumulated in the ceiling, the walls were torn when State Senator Joe Hill of Henderson, quizzed:

"If you didn't get a perfect mortar connection between the pieces of tile designed to convey the gas to the air, the gas might escape, mightn't it?"

Maddox answered affirmatively and said it was "possible" that it might eventually pervade the entire wall.

Prior to the court hearing, Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas explosion expert, said he was convinced gas explosion caused the tragedy.

Some of the gas cylinders in the school in which the fuel exploded. The blast blew things too far to be a direct explosion. If fuel had been ignited by a broken engine, the explosion would have been instant. But witnesses in the school house say a long period elapsed between the time they smelled gas and the blast.

District Attorney Stone Wolfe of Rusk county sat beside Belew during testimony at the hearing but said he "didn't think there was a possibility of criminal law violations."

A brief account of the explosion was given by Frank Hodges of Henderson.

"I was standing at the north east corner of the building with about four other men when I heard the explosion happen. It made a muffled sound."

He was with two other persons returning to the school house from the cafeteria when the blast occurred.

Frank Hodges said it seemed the roof was heaving towards the east and added he did not see whether the roof had been blown upward. Hodges, plumbing contractor for the school house, was asked if the roof had been pushed up by the force of the explosion.

"It looked like it," he said.

Only a few unidentified dead remained in east Texas morgues, probably less than five non-officials estimated. Frantic parents continued to visit surrounding towns to peer between sheets at torn bodies hoping not finding they may find their child.

School officials said no definite plans had been considered to replace the demolished school house.

Henderson school officials offered the use of their schools to all students between the fifth and twelfth grades. Eighteen miles from the New London district, Henderson is the nearest town of any size. Workers began to clear the debris from the ruins.

At Austin, Governor James V. Allred recommended that heating installations in Texas school buildings similar to that at New London not be used until after careful safety examinations. He acted after he had been informed that several other schools in east Texas are similarly equipped.

He set aside tomorrow as a day of prayer in Texas.

Directed by the New London fire chief, City Manager E. G. Baker of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma City, selected a crew of oil gas lines men to help in the search for dead.

come tax as it is now rigged. But are we going to hire a hall, and make speeches about it?

We are not. The lads down in Washington might take another peck at our return.

At most, we are but a small operator in the matter of government income tax, anyway.

If it seems large enough to us, it probably seems mighty tiny to the fellow who makes out those checks for the government overhead.

With it all however, there prevailed a strange restraint of emotions. Only occasionally did sobs become audible. Tear-filled eyes were many.

Ministers recruited from over the hills, pine-studded east Texas area performed funeral services in relays. From dawn to dusk, services were held in churches, in funeral chapels, in the small homes of oil workers.

On several occasions one service was held for groups of victims.

National guardsmen patrolled the school house sector—now only a levelled mass of brick and an occasional steel beam. Most of it was moved away by a thousand oil field workers who clawed and fought their way through the debris for nearly 24 hours to reach trapped bodies of children.

Only a pitifully few were lifted out alive. Hospitals still housed nearly 300 injured and physicians' reports held but little hope for many of them. Fractured limbs and skulls were alarmingly dominant and attendants feared the youngsters would be maimed for life if they did live.

A steady stream of parents applied for and received loans today to defray burial expenses of their children from the First State bank of Overton.

M. C. Parris, president, said many of them were too grief-stricken to discuss their wants. "They simply indicated by motions what they wanted and signed notes," he said.

One man whose three children were to be sent to Alabama for burial, pledged his few shares of stock in a major oil company.

"They're all customers of ours and none are denied assistance," Parris said.

Only a few unidentified dead remained in east Texas morgues, probably less than five non-officials estimated. Frantic parents continued to visit surrounding towns to peer between sheets at torn bodies hoping not finding they may find their child.

School officials said no definite plans had been considered to replace the demolished school house.

WE DO NOT share their ire against Mr. Roosevelt.

Even when we are hottest over the government income tax, we remember that we may be partly responsible for it. We have a vague recollection of being lukily in favor of us going over to France that time to help lick those central powers.

We recall standing up in night clubs when the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner." We cheered the boys on their way, and implored them to give 'em hell for us. Of course, had we known that the government income tax was coming up largely as a result of our patriotism, we would have kept our trap closed.

It was the war, of course, that started our government really going to town on income tax. But how could we know that after 20 years we still would be paying off on a few little cries of encouragement?

NOT ONLY do we entertain no anger against Mr. Roosevelt over the income tax, but we are not even mad six bones at the government gentleman who writes us letters about our own tax.

It is true that the reason we have not replied properly, and remain somewhat undressed to the fact that every time we get a letter from the government gentleman it scared us out of a year's growth, so we are about 14 years behind.

Nevertheless we have come to regard the government gentleman as a faithful old correspondent. A lot of folks who are supposed to be our friends seldom write us letters. The government gentleman never fails us.

We were not up in a hospital one time and lonesome for some news of the outside world. Not one single letter came from a friend. We might have been dead, for all they seemed to care. But the government gentleman wrote us twice, in the most courteous terms, and remarked, in passing, that he would like to see us.

Can we cherish ill nature against a gentleman like that?

THE FELLOW we do not care for is the fellow who says:

"Well, I am tickled to death that I have an income to pay tax on."

We do not like this fellow, because he is putting himself away as morally superior to the rest of the five per cent of our population of 130,000,000 that makes returns on income.

Let the fellow say he is tickled to death he has an income. We will be tickled with him, and for him. But let him not suggest that paying the income tax is any part of the tickle. If that were true, the fellow would be too good for this world.

We do not think it right that many persons of substantial income should be exempted from the income tax for one reason and another. It is among the inequalities of the law that recognizes deterioration in machinery, but makes no allowance for depreciation in human beings.

We really ought to let out quite a yap about these exempts. But candor compels us to admit that if we could legally out-fumble our Uncle Samuel in the same manner, we would do it as quickly as you can bat an eye.

We know the income tax is necessary. Yet we do not have to give three cheers for it, do we?

Department store sales in the federal reserve bank district composed of states in the deep south were up approximately 30 per cent over 1936. Higher wages and higher prices for farm products all brought increasing bank deposits and increased bank clearings.

Railroads used all their technical skill to prevent a car shortage in heavy industrial areas. The Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. plant at Bessemer, Ala., idle except for short periods since 1930, had orders on hand or in prospect to keep it in production through most of 1937.

November 23, 1931—Convicted for molesting the morals of a minor, sentence indeterminate.

May 5, 1935—Arrested for annoying a young girl on a subway train, convicted of disorderly conduct.

February 4, 1937—Arrested for rape. The charge was subsequently reduced to endangering the morals of a minor, and is pending.

Ossido denied the Wiles killing.

The child Elmer had left her home yesterday morning and at nightfall her father, John Sporrer, a hotel fireman, notified the police she had not returned. This morning Kalman Yaskowitz, a passerby, found the burlap sack.

THREE JURISTS

recent country-wide distress due largely to industrial unemployment has caused federal expenditure of billions, largely borrowed. Still it remains true that the relief of such conditions is primarily the duty and burden of the several states. These two interacting responsibilities, we think, are the key to the legislation under scrutiny. To refill the federal treasury and also to encourage the states to assume for the future their proper burden (as it is with its credit scheme has been devised. There is in it no undue coercion or compulsion of states. * * *

The opinion pointed out that revenues from the social security act "enter the treasury as free funds set apart to no special use and subject to be applied to any congressional appropriation. * * * The social security act originated in the house of representatives as a revenue measure should."

"Since we hold the exaction to be a tax," the opinion concluded, "there is no room for the contention that private property has been taken for public use without just compensation. The general benefits government are the compensation for all takings through taxation. We think the tax and its credit are to be upheld as against the attack here made. The judgment of the lower court is affirmed."

A 5-day-old Arabs term was handed in Labradie on July 22, 1927, and within three months was found in Rochelle, France.

REJECTED NEGRO SUITOR FATALLY WOUNDS BRIDE; SHOOTS HUSBAND IN LEG

RAYVILLE, La., March 20.—(Special)—A rejected negro suitor, in a jealous rage, fatally wounded a negro woman who had become the bride of another man several hours previously, and then turned the gun on the bridegroom, wounding him in the leg.

The rejected suitor, Willie Neal, is held here in the Richland parish jail. Curtis Harrington, the swain whose bid for the hand of Millie Mae Daniels was accepted, is recuperating from the effects of the bullet wound in his leg. Millie Mae has gone to an untimely death perhaps largely because she waved her marriage license at the rejected suitor and shouted: "We're married!"

Millie Mae and Curtis, who reside in the Warden community, obtained their marriage license here at the office of the parish clerk of court, and were married by T. J. Cowen, Rayville justice of the peace. Passing through Delhi on their way back to Warden, the couple met Willie Neal and greeted him with the news that they had been married.

The news, and the waving of the license were too much for Neal Pulling a pistol from his clothing, he went berserk.

Tuning In With The Infinite

It would seem that as long as the human family has occupied the earth it would have learned before now how to live here; that it would have learned there is a source of Infinite Power of good, and would have learned to put itself in tune with that power, and to teach its young that precious art.

That there is this Infinite Power, that it is available to everyone, that it can guide human beings safely through this world and into a better one, is generally accepted, from the most enlightened nations to the crudest savage tribes. Yet, in spite of this knowledge, in spite of its daily, hourly proofs, the human family goes on, generation after generation, century after century, blundering aimlessly about, putting everything else ahead of acquiring the magnificent art of learning how to contact the Infinite and stay in tune with it.

How can one learn the art of tuning in on the Infinite? The answer involves another question: How would you learn the art of playing the piano, of practicing law, dentistry; of acquiring a working understanding of any of the great sciences? You would, of course, set to work systematically to study the thing, wouldn't you? You would not expect someone to give you a magic pill which would do the work for you—that would be too easy for so great a prize. And if you sincerely desired to be big in your work, you would study everything you could find on the subject; you would take care that your knowledge was not restricted to any narrow school of thought.

So let him who would learn the vital part of tuning in on the Infinite, apply himself assiduously to a scientific study of that art—the greatest of all the great sciences.

Fathers and mothers are to blame for the colossal ignorance of the art of tuning in on the Infinite and of staying in tune with it. For if parents would learn that art themselves and constantly live it, and use it, and surround themselves and their children with such an atmosphere, the children would adapt themselves to it as naturally and as easily as little ducks learn to swim—for such is the human soul's normal atmosphere.

Human souls coming into this world in baby form, if they knew what was before them, might well utter the prayer: "Oh, let me be born into a family whose members know what it is all about, and who will teach me what it is all about."

SIGNOR BOOFALO BEEL

We have drawn so much inspiration from the old world that perhaps we should not rail at Italy's claim to Buffalo Bill. An Italian newspaper in Bologna has "discovered" that the real name is Giovanni Tambini, and not William F. Cody, and that he was born in Barbigarezzo in 1840 and not in Scott county, Iowa, in 1846, as we had always been led to believe. Heirs of the Indian fighter, according to the Italian publication, are still living at Compiano, near Parma, and intend to bring suit "to recover a large fortune which he left in the United States."

Shame fascisti! The debunkers of history have been so busy tearing down the precious stories attached to Washington and Lincoln and General Grant, that little has been left to the small boy on which to nourish his imagination. And Buffalo Bill was one of those rare individuals who made history and romance with every movement of his trusty rifle.

And besides the noted Indian fighter died in comparative poverty, leaving only a pittance. We wonder if that information will have any effect on the "heirs," who live at Compiano, near Parma?

TIME FOR COOPERATION

The strike wave that is sweeping across the country is doubtless due in large part to the conviction of certain labor leaders that current evidences of economic recovery justify an attempt to procure higher wages, shorter working hours and the closed shop.

However, it is likely that this slant may prove to be not only fallacious but extremely damaging to the cause of the working man.

If business and industry are seriously hamstrung during the recovery period, another economic decline of dangerous proportions may eventuate.

Present conditions plainly call for cooperation between capital and labor, not for the kind of unproductive bickering and strife that inevitably lead to lower wages, diminished purchasing power and unemployment.

SMALL LOANS

Although accustomed to talking and thinking in large figures, most persons are astonished by the total of $7,000,000,000 advanced annually to finance people who require small loans without commercial collateral.

No less than $2,600,000,000 of this is provided by various loan companies to persons who can offer no banking credit. The rest is to carry installment buying.

This vast credit volume with its involved small losses to the companies making small loans or selling on the partial paymer plan is pointed to as proof of the economic stability of the average man.

RHYME AND REASON

THE UNFINISHED SYMPHONY

Perhaps Shubert, whose liquid notes of love
Sing in his symphony, could find no end
For such a theme . . . To starlit skies above
From daisy-studded earth love's flames ascend.
Pale candles gleam on altars love has made.
A votive light burns in each mother's heart.
A bonfire leaps in the deserted glade.
Upon the mountain top the high flares start.

How can love's music end? This could not be.
For life would finish and all hearts be broken
Without the meaning in this symphony.
From the celestial choirs the word is spoken,
And love is our reward for every breath
We draw in life, and even beyond death.

IF APES INVADED

By BRUCE CATTON

Nothing is more tantalizing than a story that is only partly told. It is all very well to use the imagination to fill in the gaps, but there are places where this is not enough.

There is, for example, the little story about the monkey who went to the movies.

This story, originating in India, got on the cables the other day and was printed in divers American newspapers. It told how a monkey wandered into a motion picture theater in Bangalore. He seems to have come in about 20 minutes after the picture started, walking unmolested through the main entrance and taking a seat in the popular-priced section.

He behaved, according to the story, "like any orderly film fan," remaining to the end of the picture and departing with dignity.

Now that is all very well as far as it goes, but it leaves a lot untold. What picture was it, for instance, that drew this adventurous monkey out of the jungle? Was it, by any chance, one of those miraculous things in which Johnny Weissmuller swings gallantly from tree to tree; and if so, did the monkey understand what Johnny was saying, and applaud? Was it one of those penthouse-and-chorus-girl pictures, with a villain who collects etchings and means no good? Or could it have been a gorgeous Hollywood musical, with phalanxed dancing beauties going through their maneuvers with the camera poised directly overhead?

It would be interesting, too, to know how the monkey reacted to the "trailers"—those combinations of adjectives and action which undertake to tell what is going to be shown next week. Is it going too far to say that he would seem to be the ideal audience for such things?

Far more vital than these questions, however, is the effect which an afternoon of movie-going may have on this ape's future. Will it render him dissatisfied with jungle life, infected with a taste for human society? Will he wind up by leading a simple exodus, so that monkeys as a group take to dropping in on all kinds of human gatherings?

The thought is a shuddery one. A chimpanzee might wander into one of our more dignified clubs, drop into an easy chair, and go unnoticed for ever so long, mistaken for one of the members. A gorilla might stray onto a college campus and become a football hero before the error was discovered. And the imagination reels at the thought of a simian invasion of the house of representatives. What laws might not get passed, before the correspondents were able to spot the invaders?

It is a thought-provoking business, this of the monkey at the movie. The Indian correspondent really should have told us much more about it.

A BOOK REVIEW

LIFE'S JUST AN ACT TO 'THEATER' LADY

A good many novelists have written romances about the glamorous ladies of the theater, and most of such books have been dreary failures. Instead of conveying the required glamor and sparkle they leave the reader feeling that stage folk are a queer lot and that what happens to them doesn't matter much, anyway.

Somerset Maugham, as you might suspect, is different. In "Theater," he writes of the life and loves of an English actress and produces a book which is unfailingly delightful.

He is not deceived about his heroine or about the stage itself. The lady is, in brief, a bit of a heel. She can't stop acting when she gets out from behind the footlights; in the tensest moments of her life, she must automatically think of the effect she is creating, plan her "exit line," express herself in the words of some play in which she has appeared in the past.

But her saving grace is that down in the bottom of her heart she doesn't kid herself. She recognizes her life for what it is—an act. And as long as she she has the theater, nothing that happens outside really bothers her.

Which is lucky, for her love life is somewhat frighty. Living platonically with her husband, who is also her producer, she falls violently for a lad 20 years her junior, and has a romantic affair with him—until he ditches her for a much younger actress. Then she trots out the second string to her bow, an aging and wealthy admirer whom she has kept dangling for two decades—and discovers that he no longer wants her.

But is she broken up by this? She is not. She opens in a new play, makes a great success, and then—realizing that she is slipping out of the era of romance and sex appeal—goes out to eat a thumping big dinner of steak, onions, and beer, repeating that she need no longer worry about her figure.

THE BATTLES OF THE CENTURY

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

I have been having a dandy time running off his novels he keeps writing about purebred dogs—facts that will interest dog lovers and also those who cannot tell one dog from another.

The Airedale was the Queen in Yorkshire [illegible]. President picks a quartet for his own use and will fight to the end. The Boston is the most favored of the non-sporting breeds. And is the pride of stately America heritage. It is at home in city houses or apartments.

The Retriever often seen with sporting parties, is a direct link to the fighting dogs of Tibet. Many consider it the best of watch dogs and it is usually friendly around children.

The bull terrier is the all white [illegible] with the long pointed face. It is a one-man dog and not to be trusted around other dogs for, in battle, it is a killer and even [illegible] will make it lose grip.

The Collie, so picturized with the Duke of Windsor, comes from the Highlands of Scotland and is a dog of tremendous gut. The fox and the badger are his especial dish. The Chesapeake Bay Retriever is favored only by hunting men.

The Chow is, of course, of ancient Chinese origin. The blue chows are generally conceded to have been developed in the Buddhist monasteries. Chows are [illegible] favorite animals. They seem to be treacherous [illegible] and rarely wash any other animal. The Doberman Pinscher and Police dog will often attack small dogs and should be muzzled on the street.

Albert Payson Terhune has said about everything there is to say regarding the Collie. He [illegible] from the Scotch Highland. It was primarily a working dog but later was crossed with sheep sheep dogs. This [illegible] in developing the wary, shrewd and intelligent animal. It was built to [illegible] herds. A long slender body. Runs the most varieties of all breeds.

The English bull was to be big and [illegible] a cross of the most [illegible]. Especially with savage ones. The French bull is smaller. Developed from a cross of the bulldog and [illegible]. When not [illegible] they are a bow of beige and brown [illegible].

Mary Mallon's favorite, the Irish terrier, is related to the wolfhound and was developed in Ireland. The Poke is a fox hound and a favorite with women. Likes [illegible]. A pure breed, [illegible] the Poke. A pure breed, [illegible] he is the one who captured the best dog at the recent dog show in the Garden.

From Marion Tomes "Dogs in Battle" is your guide. "Best because of legs, head, chest." Dogs here are known as "dogue." And a bull grow [illegible] on a wooden leg. [illegible] with [illegible] telephone poles and [illegible] like a baby monkey on a wild grape vine.

Voice: I believe A. L. Alexander has the most liquid and satisfying male voice on the air. The one that annoys me most is that of Boake Carter. He suggests talking with his mouth full of food and a couple of loose plates and his [illegible] phones. It is a coincidence because he is [illegible] something of interest to say. Most of us who tune in could get along without Martha Raye screeching, although she sings well enough, if you like that kind of [illegible] singing. It is a pity to hear Ralph Ahern and Ralph Forbes's enunciation is superb. Rudy Vallee could be a disturbing voice on the air with that nasal twang but somehow it isn't. Now and then I become fed up with Ed Wynn's flutey uptakes but invariably go back to them.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., seemingly able to take it. Despite the critical roasting [illegible] his "Farewell to Fifth Avenue" got an awful drubbing and his latest, supposedly an inside on Washington, was handed some stiff jolts. Vanderbilt likes to pose as "riding in upper berths" his idea of democracy and frequently mentions that people refer to him as "that young radical."

One of the communistic cries is that no one in America shall go hungry. As though they thought up that idea. America has never allowed her people to go hungry. The recent generosity for the Red Cross appeal for the flood-stricken is highly demonstrable of the American spirit in helping fellow men in want and hunger. The response was a deluge. The needed funds were constantly over-subscribed.

"Molly, Bless Her" (Harper's) is Frances Marion's story of the career of Marie Dressler. Her rise, middle-aged letdown and triumphant upshoot in old age. Few know, incidentally, that Marie Dressler, on the eve of her final success, had decided to take her last $900 and open a small pension for Americans in Paris.

I do not like that term "reforming the judiciary." The supreme court may need reorganization. I wouldn't know. But it doesn't need to be reformed. There are no rascals in it. That term sounds a little crude, ill-tempered and striking old age below the belt. The rampant Bob La Follette is the chief offender in this regard.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. C. C. Little

Managing Director of the American Society for the Control of Cancer

CANCER CONTROL

An increasing optimism on the part of the medical profession on the possibilities of controlling cancer and a growing belief in the importance of lay education are shown in replies to a letter from the American Society for the Control of Cancer seeking advice on how best to delodge what we called the five key psychological log at the center of the general dam that blocks efforts to control cancer through education. These letters were sent out on December 4 to 50 physicians throughout the country, selected to give a cross section of the opinion of those members of the profession particularly interested in cancer.

The psychological logs listed were:

1. The ideal fear and disgust that many still feel toward cancer and any discussion of it.
2. The widespread belief that cancer is incurable.
3. The feeling that cancer education causes cancer phobias, that the hurt done to nervous and neurotic people outweighs the good done through lives saved.
4. The depressing conviction that even many intelligent people have that if a parent dies of cancer, so will they.
5. The faith in quacks and bottled "cures" and other fake nostrums.

Replies were uniformly encouraging to those of us who are devoting our efforts at the present time to a nation-wide campaign of cancer education through the various field agencies of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. It was agreed by all correspondents that lay education was needed and needed badly and that the sporadic campaigns of the last quarter of a century had done an amazing amount to break down general resistance to discussion of this problem.

Most significant was the feeling that fear and disgust were gradually being overcome. It was pointed out that no longer do many persons think that cancer is infectious. The best of all propaganda and the most convincing was held to be the living examples of those who have been treated for cancer and are alive and happy. Just as once everyone knew someone who had died of cancer, so today nearly everyone knows someone who has been cured of it.

The records of the American College of Surgeons showing that no less than 25,000 persons are alive and well five, 10 and 15 years after being treated of cancer have done much to convince people that cancer is curable. Fear of imagined dangers of treatment by X-rays or radium is gradually being dissipated as the public learns that the two invaluable techniques for treating the disease are perfectly safe in the hands of a skilled operator.

Few doctors seem disturbed at the so-called cancerphobias that a few very nervous people sometimes show as a result of cancer education. In fact several denied categorically that such education could ever cause harm. Sound facts honestly and conservatively presented do not cause "fright" in normal persons.

The fear that if one member of a family dies of cancer, so must all the rest, is giving way before the lesson of experience and the evidence of the laboratory, these doctors indicate. It is generally recognized that only a tendency toward the disease may be inherited. Those who have a high incidence of cancer in their families should be concerned only to avoid irritations that might increase their prospect of having the disease. They should not and do not feel that inevitably cancer will "get" them.

Quacks, it was felt, remain a serious menace. Despite warnings and educational drives many otherwise intelligent laymen continue to patronize get-well-quick cures. This misplaced trust will be broken down, it was agreed, only by a long and slow process of education.

This evidence of support for the cause of lay education on the part of medical men is gratifying. Emphasis was given in letter after letter to the need of enlisting the support of the newspapers in this work. As one doctor put it: "People seem to believe what they read in a newspaper more wholeheartedly than what they hear from any other source, even from a trusted family doctor." No longer is the scientist afraid of publicity in a good cause. This attitude means that the women's field army can count on the support of the individual physician as well as the cancer committees of the state medical societies which the ahead cooperating in the movement.

If the average individual gives the same support to the women's field army, cancer mortality can in a few years be cut in half. Every man and woman should learn the cancer danger signals and if they appear, seek medical advice at once. These signals may not mean cancer but they certainly [illegible] that a visit to a physician is imperative. These signals are:

1. Any persistent lump or thickening, especially of the breast.
2. Any irregular bleeding or discharge from any body openings.
3. Any sore that does not heal—particularly about the tongue, mouth or lips.
4. Persistent indigestion.
5. Sudden changes in the form or rate of growth of a mole or wart.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON. — The first three days of attack and counter-attack before the senate judiciary committee left administration generals convinced that the opposition will have to develop a more effective fire if the Roosevelt supreme court plan is to be defeated.

The Roosevelt case in all its strength, carefully prepared and pruned of its weak points by some of the keenest minds in government service, was laid down to the committee by Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings, Assistant Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson and Judge John Patrick Devaney, president of the National Lawyers' Guild.

Weakness of opposing senators in cross-examination was commented upon by observers in all camps. Press gallery betting odds on the Roosevelt scheme went up. Veteran correspondents, who had seen hundreds of witnesses hounded and harassed by senate committees, were surprised to find that leaders of the opposition seemed unprepared and unable to pierce the armor of the plan's advocates.

Prematurely, probably, strategists in charge of the Roosevelt court campaign were jubilant in anticipation of victory.

Wouldn't Be Tripped

To all of which, the opposition grimly replies: "Just wait and see!" The mental agility of Cummings was the biggest surprise of the early hearings. Some of the attorney general's own good friends, who had regarded him as an amiable and rather elderly gentleman not quite fast enough for the give-and-take of such an occasion, were pleasantly astonished. Instead of being led to pitfalls by Senators Borah, Burke, Van Nuys, King, Austin, O'Mahoney, Connally and Steiwer, the attorney general registered as a nimble-[illegible] confident, drawling Yankee who seemed to be master of the situation.

They started out to pin him up, but very [illegible] seem to get anywhere. He dished out [illegible] but so [illegible] that no one pinned him down. He stuck to the position that he was only trying to make it possible for congress to fulfill its function of legislating, and that he would be perfectly happy to live under the law as interpreted by Justices Brandeis, Cardozo and Stone. He was aided considerably by Senator [illegible] of Vermont, whose [illegible] turned many a caustic [illegible] and from the [illegible] snacks from Cummings.

Will Stand Or Fall

Jackson demonstrated, as he had on previous occasions, that he was one of the government's three or four most brilliant lawyers. The administration will stand or fall on points he made and sought to prove—that congress is responsible for proper functioning of the supreme court; that the judiciary has usurped a veto power over federal legislation and is unjustly expanding this power; that the supreme court has [illegible] its own [illegible] and prestige that only a balancing of the members can restore it to balance.

T. O. Mahoney of Wyoming, who suggested an amendment providing that only 6 of 9 justices could invalidate federal laws, replied that the Roosevelt bill would have judicial power [illegible] to [illegible]. To Burke of Nebraska, who asked if he would like a [illegible] of the court sometime by conservatives, he replied that conservatives always sought to keep things as status quo; that the supreme court never initiated anything; that one branch of government was going to stop [illegible] that progress needed all three branches.

Prefers Liberal Three

[illegible] who was to [illegible] Mahoney [illegible] that [illegible] AAA and the [illegible]? He said that a requirement of a 7 to 2 vote for invalidation of a law would mean that a majority of three justices could prevent an act which violated civil or religious liberties; that our judicial system does not work in such a way as to permit the courts to segregate or isolate the constitutional issues in litigation brought before it.

Echoing Cummings and Jackson, Mahoney said he preferred the judicial philosophies of Brandeis, Cardozo and Stone to that of those who share the views of the American Bar association.

REITZELL ASKS AID OF PUBLIC

Police Chief Urges Cooperation To Keep Down Motor Accidents

Urging the public to cooperate with city officials in the reduction of the number of avoidable motor accidents, Chief Frank Reitzell of the Monroe police department, issued a statement Saturday as follows:

"The Monroe police department is making a conscientious effort to protect life, limb and property in our city by enforcing the traffic laws in a reasonable and sensible manner.

"I appeal to the public to be more careful in the operation of motor vehicles in our city.

"Last year there were 1,578,000 persons killed and injured in the United States from motor vehicular accidents, and thus far this year there has been a substantial increase over the same period of last year. Unfortunately, Monroe has contributed more than it should to this record. Therefore, it is imperative that all of us become more safety minded so that a reduction in our traffic accidents may follow.

"Especially do I call upon the parents of the city to prohibit the operation of motor vehicles by their children under the driving age of 17. The city ordinance makes it unlawful for any parent to permit a child below 17 to operate a motor vehicle.

"In its efforts to promote the public safety, the police department has the full cooperation of Judge Harper of the city court, who has declared that he will penalize all offenders guilty of unsafe driving in the city. However, both the police department and the court realize how futile will be their efforts without the wholehearted support of the public."

POPE IS JOYOUS AT PALM SUNDAY

Receives Traditional Easter Gift Extending Back For 400 Years

VATICAN CITY, March 20. (AP) Pope Pius XI, joyous for having been spared for still another Easter week, began today his Palm Sunday celebrations of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Fresh palm leaves decorated every Roman balcony in commemoration of the day and the pope received the traditional Easter gift that has marked the opening of the festive season for almost 400 years.

As to all popes since 1586 the Bresca family in San Remo sent a palm especially ornamented with gilt and flowers.

The great-great-grandfather of the Bresca family won the privilege for his cause, by disobeying Pope Sixtus' commands, he won that pontiff's gratitude.

The Bresca ancestor was a sailor when he helped raise the great obelis in St. Peter's plaza in 1586. All the workmen were commanded to absolute silence, but he could not refrain from shouting his advice when the monument began to get out of control.

"Throw water on the ropes!" he yelled. His presence of mind was said to have saved not only the obelisk but the lives of hundreds.

Pope Sixtus forgave the young sailor his breach of discipline and asked him to name his boon. He humbly asked the privilege of displaying publicly with palms each Palm Sunday.

Cardinals are expected to celebrate the services in the St Peter's and to join the Latvian catholics in mass. Special masses and prayers were planned in most of Rome's churches to celebrate the Pope's

WEATHER NOT WARM AS SPRING BEGINS

By Associated Press

That cold breath on the back of northerners' necks last (Saturday) night was spring.

Spring began, so the meteorologists said at 6:45 p.m., when the sun crossed the equator on its northern journey.

But there was little corroborative evidence in most of the nation.

Snow, ranging up to three inches at Detroit, fell in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa.

Skiing remained in vogue in western Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire.

Temperatures near or below freezing were the rule in the northwest. A chill north wind moved across Missouri and Kansas.

Nebraskans regarded a blanket of melting snow, measuring from a quarter inch to nearly a foot, as beneficial to spring planting.

A driving rain kept New York cool, but offered the enjoyment of warm weather in parts of Kentucky and Pennsylvania.

Way down south, however, the weather was balmy.

GOVERNOR LECHE PICKS WINNERS IN LOUISIANA TECH BEAUTY CONTEST

EVELYN WALL ◆ MILDRED CRAWFORD ◆ DIXIE GILBERT SNOWDIE HOWARD ◆ RUTH HARRELL ◆ MILDRED BURKE

With photographs of 31 Louisiana Tech girls cluttering his desk at the capitol in Baton Rouge, Governor Richard W. Dixie Gilbert of Wisner, was chosen as No. 1 among the prize-winners, with the other five ranking as follows: Snowdie Howard, Lake Providence, second; Mildred Burke, Ruston, third; Mildred Crawford, Plain Dealing, fourth; Evelyn Wall, West Monroe, fifth, and Ruth Harrell, Alexandria. 8 Teams Formed To Raise Funds For Jews Overseas

Distressing Conditions Abroad Stressed By F. Strauss At Meeting

Eight fund raising teams representing industrial, commercial and social groups throughout the city were organized last night at a special meeting of the campaign committee conducting the Monroe drive of the American Jewish joint distribution committee to provide American aid for distressed Jews overseas.

The campaign here opened March 19 and will extend through April 19. The national 1937 quota of the joint distribution committee is $1,000,000 which Spitzer [illegible] in the city.

Addressing the workers last night at the Masonic temple were Rabbi [illegible] and Frank P. Strauss, chairman of the local drive, at a meeting Friday night [illegible].

"Upon us who have escaped the horrors of persecution rests the great responsibility. We must keep faith with the American tradition of helping the distressed and the victims of misfortune in other lands by raising and expending [illegible] funds. And especially we must help those to our fellow citizens as consequences of the great need in which Jews of Germany, Poland and other lands of eastern and central Europe find themselves.

"The story is tragic in its simplicity. In Poland, Roumania and other countries of eastern Europe millions of Jews live in the direst poverty and in constant danger of riot and pogrom. Two children are often [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] youth [illegible] and together as to the future. Hundreds of thousands, even [illegible] of [illegible] of the [illegible] of Jewish [illegible].

Very often they are permitted to stay only short periods of time in any one country. They are shunted from border to border, from country to country, helpless, hopeless, human beings.

"Even if thousands of these unfortunate men and women have been helped by refugee committees, in the various countries, which receive funds from the joint distribution committee. Thousands have been given relief until funds have been enabled to learn new occupations thus preparing them either for permanent settlement in foreign lands. Many have been helped to emigrate overseas. But many, many remain who still need help, who must continue to look for support to American generosity and the joint distribution committee.

PRESIDENT BUSY ON PHILIPPINES

Studies Proposal For Granting Islands Speedier Independence

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., March 20 — President Roosevelt, at the conclusion of a busy afternoon, gave attention today to the proposal of President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippines that the islands be granted speedier independence.

Earlier, he talked with Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama who endorsed the president's supreme court program.

Paul V. McNutt, new high commissioner to the Philippines, went over the independence question at dinner at the presidential vacation cottage on Pine mountain.

McNutt, former Indiana governor, is leaving next month for his Manila post. Just what Mr. Roosevelt's reaction was to Quezon's proposal that complete island freedom be effected in 1938 or 1939 instead of 1946 as provided in the independence act was not disclosed.

Under a preliminary agreement between the two countries the question of substituting a reciprocal trade pact for existing preferential commercial relations would be studied.

Governor Graves' endorsement of the supreme court reorganization proposal followed a similar Warm Springs announcement earlier in the week by Governor E. D. Rivers of Georgia.

Swinging his legs back and forth under an office table he chose for a seat, Graves said Alabama had prospered under the Roosevelt administration and he wanted the president to know its people were grateful.

"We have more prosperity in Alabama than ever before," he said. "We have more food, clothes, homes, automobiles and bank accounts.

"We have more of the things we live for in Alabama all we have more faith in ourselves and in our country and its commander."

The governor said every cotton state was on a "firmer foundation than ever before," after "four years of from 10 to 14-cent cotton.

"The outlook is strong," he added, "as during recent months we have had more workers getting more as much pay. With a re-vitalized agriculture and a [illegible] industry, Alabama is looking forward to [illegible]

[illegible] of Gly-Cas. I had been in a miserable condition. I had been troubled with awful indigestion, gas [illegible] after every meal and at times I would bloat until I could hardly breathe. "Matter" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, March 21, 1937.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." (John 4:)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "That God is a corporeal Being, nobody can truly affirm. The Bible represents Him as saying: 'Thou canst not see My face: for there shall no man see Me and live.' Not materially but spiritually we know Him as divine Mind, as Life, Truth and Love. We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love him understandingly, warring no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God. Religions will then be of the heart and not of the head. Mankind will no longer be tyrannical and proscriptive from lack of love, straining out gnats and swallowing camels. We worship spiritually, only as we cease to worship materially. Spiritual devoutness is the soul of Christianity." (p. 140.)

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH
Oak and St. John Streets
Crayton S. Brooks, Pastor

We are entering upon the "Ten Weeks Loyalty Campaign," but five weeks are required for preparation. Total 15 weeks. The Bible school is our first concern. It is imperative that every teacher be present on time with a prepared lesson. We cannot begin with less than that. The pupils should be ablaze with zeal to get the whole class there. Sermon at 10:50 a. m., "The White Horse and His Rider." Communion service is the climax at high noon. Two live Endeavor groups convene at 6:30 p. m. Sermon at 7:30 p. m. in honor of Fanny Crosby, and a memorial song service, using her songs. Her birthday is March 24. On Wednesday evening we will have as our guests, members of the First Presbyterian church and their pastor. Our group will lead the music. Dr. Holloway will bring the message. On Thursday evening we hope to join other Protestant congregations in a great union communion service at the Presbyterian church. The pastor's subject for the morning worship will be "The Only Man Who Never Failed." Isa. 42:1-4. A great drive is being made to bring back the absentees, and to enlist new members in the Sunday school. We are looking forward to having a full house on Sunday. We are always glad to have visitors at any and all of our services. The B. T. U. is preparing for a "big round-up." Now that the winter days are gone and "flu" has subsided, we must get in the harness again, and do our best for the One who gave Himself for us. The pastor's evening message will be from the subject: "Pay Day Someday." Kings 21:18, 19, 23. The choir director, Mr. R. L. Mercer, gives a splendid musical program at each service.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
St. John and Grammont Streets
L. T. Hastings, Pastor
D. C. Black, Director of Education and Music

We are expecting Sunday to be a great day in all the services, beginning with the Sunday school at 9:45. Bad weather and the "flu" have conspired against our efforts to steadily build up our Sunday school attendance to 1,000 by Sunday, but we are not discouraged; we will keep on keeping on until we reach the goal. And yet we do not know what we would do with them just stand them up until we get more room, and that is what we hope to do some day. Interest in renewing building activities is increasing. The pastor will speak Sunday morning on "Let Us Go On," or "The Glory of Going On." The choir, under Mr. Black's direction, will sing the beautiful number by Parker, "Jerusalem." The evening service will be evangelistic. If you enjoy good gospel songs and warm-hearted evangelistic messages, you will enjoy the evening services at the First Baptist church. You are welcome, three welcome! Our B. T. U. study course will be held next week. We want our people to get in on this in a great way.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Fourth and Glenmar Streets
Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

The Blessed Palm will be distributed at both the 7:30 and 11 o'clock services. The rector will hold service at Saint David's, Ruston, at 4:30 p.m., and preach. Due to the fact that the choir of Grace church will sing Stainer's "Crucifixion" in Tallulah, Palm Sunday night, there will be no service at that time in Grace church. There will be services each day throughout Holy week as follows: Monday and Wednesday the Holy Eucharist will be celebrated at 9 a.m.; Tuesday and Saturday the Holy Eucharist will be celebrated at 7:30 a.m. Services for Maundy Thursday are as follows: The Holy Eucharist will be celebrated at 7:30 a.m. and 9 a.m.; the children singing the service at the 9 o'clock celebration. Services for Good Friday are as follows: Matins and Pro-Anaphora and address at 9 a.m. Devotions on the Passion of our Lord from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. Preparation for Easter Communion at 8 p.m. On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, evensong and address at 4:30 p.m. On Wednesday, the choir will sing John Stainer's "Crucifixion" at 8 p.m. The Collect for Palm Sunday is the ancient Latin one for the day; while the Liturgical Gospel for the day is the story of the Passion; the Epistle brings the lesson of our Lord's life and Passion right home to all who bear His name—"all who profess and call themselves Christians." "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." As we follow Jesus to Calvary let us strive to learn His mind, His way of looking at things and people and dealing with them. CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
George H. Dierlamm, Minister

"Holy Week" from Palm Sunday to Easter, let us follow the life of Jesus during this week. Returning to Bethany after Palm Sunday for a night's rest, Jesus left the next morning for Jerusalem where He cleansed the Temple. On Tuesday our Lord spoke the parables of the two sons, the wicked husbandman, the marriage of the king's son, the ten virgins, the talents and the last judgment. Wednesday was a quiet day. On Thursday there was the observance of the last supper, the designation of the betrayer and the washing of the disciples' feet. Early Friday morning, just after midnight came Gethsemane, the betrayal, the arrest, and then the swift movement of events that led to His death. Good Friday was a day of supreme anguish. In Gethsemane our Lord agonized in prayer before God, seeking an answer to the question that tortured His mind. He sweat, as it were, great drops of blood, yet he brought Himself to a complete acceptance of the will of God. Having power to lay down His life, our Lord made a perfect surrender in accepting the cross. Who can contemplate the Cross without experiencing deep contrition, a cleansing from sin and a call for a new consecration to the unfinished tasks of the Kingdom. Services of worship at Pleasant Hill at 11 a.m., at Equality at 2:30 p.m.

TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH
Harrison and D'Arbonne
Sherrouse Addition
Vernon C. Grosse, Pastor

Sunday school and Bible class at 9:45 a.m. The Bible class at present is conducting an informal discussion on the first chapter of Genesis. You are invited to join us in this study of God's Word. The gospel lesson for Palm Sunday is found in St. Matthew 21:1-9. The triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem marks the beginning of His way to the cross. His coming at this time signifies His suffering and death on the cross. But, before laying down His life for the sins of the world, He makes a last and final appeal to His people. Holy communion will be celebrated Easter morning. Registration any time during the coming week.

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Jackson At Wood Street
W. C. Scott, Pastor

At the morning hour on Sunday the main part of the service will be given over to the reception of the Easter class of children and young people into the church. At the evening hour the pastor will direct our thoughts on "The Danger of Indecision." If you have no church home, you are cordially invited to worship here. At the 11 o'clock hour on Easter Day a class of adults will be received into the church. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock, there will be a special service for the baptism of infants. At the evening hour the choir will render the cantata, "Rabboni." The public is invited. Methodists are reminded that Easter Day is Orphanage Day when all offerings are set aside for the Methodist orphanage at Ruston. Plan now to attend church that day and share liberally with these little ones who have no other means of support. If you cannot attend you may send your check in to the church office. The Knights Templar will attend our church in a body on Easter Sunday morning. The Women's Missionary society will meet in circles on Tuesday at 3 p.m.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Grammont at Catalpa
Ernest Holloway, Pastor

A class for communicants will be held in the church Monday, Wednesday and Friday, March 22, 24, 26. The hour of the meeting is 4 p.m. During these periods we shall deal with problems common to our faith, and seek the truth about God, God incarnate, sin, the church, membership in the church and the responsibilities involved in church affiliation. The cooperation of the parents is desired. We shall be happy to have any one attend. This series of discussions are given in the interest of our Easter plans, when we expect to have a large ingathering. Sunday morning the theme is "A Far Reaching Statement," the Scriptural background is Psalm 122. At the evening worship period our topic is "Wholehearted Service," as seen in the career of Caleb. These messages are calculated to result in congregational fidelity and a daily exemplification of faith. Wednesday evening, March 24, 7:30 o'clock, we are joining the folk of the First Christian persuasion in a worship of prayer and praise. This service will be held in the First Christian church. "You may lack the brilliancy, the natural ability, the commercial cleverness and the support of high society, but if you have the plugging, tugging nature of the mule you will eventually arrive with your load of logs." (The Mental Spark Plug, Van Amburgh). A hearty and sincere welcome waits you at any and all worship periods.

FILLING STATION LOOTED BY THIEVES

Captain F. S. Pettit investigated the robbery and reported that entrance into the filling station had been made through a window on the west side of the building. Only a small amount of money in pennies was said to have been in the drawer of the stolen cash register.

THREE OUTS IN A HURRY

Eddie Hock, genial manager of the Monroe ball club, is a good story teller. Eddie was a member of the Houston club while Dizzy Dean was doing some fancy chunking for the Buffs and he can spin many a yarn about the eccentric Mr. Dean. But Eddie rarely talks about himself.

But did you know that the very same Mr. Hock who will pilot the Twins this season is one of the few baseball players who ever made an unassisted triple play?

Eddie would be the last one to tell you about it, but we cornered him the other day and got the lowdown. Here's how it happened.

Eddie was playing shortstop for the Houston club back in 1927. Tex Carleton was pitching for the Buffaloes and, as usual along about that stage of the game, Tex was in trouble in the eighth inning. There was a runner on first and one on second and nobody out.

The next batter cracked a line drive that looked like a sure base hit. The base runners began scurrying for the next sack. But they didn't reckon with Brother Hock. Eddie made a lunge for the ball and snared it just behind second base. He quickly stepped on the bag to retire No. 2 and then tagged the runner coming in from first base for the third out.

Needless to state, he got a big hand for his feat, and deservedly so. Only seven players have ever turned in an unassisted triple play in the majors. The record book doesn't list minor leaguers who have turned the trick, but it's a cinch there haven't been many.

WALTER'S STOGIES

It was Monroe's gain when Walter Morris moved his offices here. Cigar dealers, particularly, should rejoice. Walter burns 'em, chews 'em, eats 'em for the box.

When President Morris left Dallas for Shreveport, and later, Monroe, George White wrote the following in the Dallas News:

"Off for the summer, J. Walter Morris boarded a Tuesday night train for Monroe, La., to establish the office from which he will operate as president of the Cotton States, East Texas and Evangeline baseball leagues and as southern promotional director for the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. In so doing and in compliance with orders from headquarters, J. Walter is adopting a policy of penalizing the people who help the game. Heretofore he has made his headquarters in Shreveport but to quote Morris—who ever heard of a president of three leagues living in a town that doesn't even have baseball? So, just for his city dropping out of the national pastime some Shreveport merchant will be out the profit on some 3,000 nickle cigars this summer and his loss will be some Monroe store operator's gain."

Dick Burnett learned long ago to pay his minor checks in exact change when Walter is along. For instance, if the bill is $7.65 and Dick hands the cashier two dollar bills, Walter will invariably pipe up "Just give us the change in nickle cigars."

OUTCLASSED

It probably never will be determined whether pro football is better than college football, for the simple reason that the so-called simon pures will never play the pros. Thus the argument will rage forever, or at least until the proponents of the two divisions of the game find something better to argue about.

It's different in basketball. The National A. A. U. tournament which closed at Denver last night again proved conclusively that the better A. A. U. clubs are faster than leading college quintets.

Most of the college teams faded out in the early rounds. Long Island university, which came out of the east with a spotless record against the best college teams in the country, was a seeded entry, but the New Yorkers were trounced 59 to 26 when they ran up against a really good A. A. U. club in the quarter-finals.

Not since 1923, when Washburn college of Topeka, Kan., won the title has a college team triumphed in the A. A. U. tourney. The year before that, Butler college, of Indianapolis, copped the crown. Since 1925—and for that matter for ten years before 1924—independent teams won the coveted championship.

It looks like the old college try isn't quite good enough in basketball.

SHORT TAKES

Vernon "LeRy" Haynes, Ouachita Parish High school coach, has been admitted to the Southern Football Officials association. That's additional well-merited recognition for a darn good local football official.

Mitch McLaughlin, sports editor of the Delta Star at Greenville compares Monroe's recovery in the Cotton States league with Greenville's return in 1934. "But," writes Mitch, "Greenville had to raise as much money as Dick Burnett is tossing into Monroe's lap. Then our ball team was hardly to be compared with the one Burnett has lined up. • • • So, all in all, they will be prize saps of the year if they fail to take full advantage and support Burnett as they should."

Big Business in football triumphed again yesterday when Dan Harrison resigned as athletic director at Pittsburgh. Dr. John Bain Sutherland may now set his scale of prices for grid stars without fear of interference.

Two contests with the Titans of Illinois Wesleyan university of Bloomington, Ill., Monday and Tuesday will start the ball rolling for the season which will include 32 games with college and university opponents.

The Tech schedule calls for 12 games in a row, skipping only Sunday, March 28, including with the opening brace with the Titans.

Cronin named Bob Doerr, Mel Almada and Buster Mills as his opening outfield. Johnny Kroner, first baseman, and Bill Dietz, second baseman, are expected to be the starting infield with Joe Cronin and Gen Desautels were selected as the catching duties and Johnny Marcum, Rene Walters, Bill Ogrodowski and Dick Mansiff will make the pitching assignments against the world champions.

MEETING OF TWIN CITY SOFTBALL LOOP DELAYED

The Twin City softball league's meeting, schedule for Monday night, has been postponed indefinitely, principally because of the injury of Gene Daspit, a member of the rules committee which was to have presented eligibility rules for ratification at the meeting.

It was also announced that F. L. Jones, elected president of the organization recently, had rejected the office because of other interests making it practically impossible for him to devote proper attentions to the welfare of the league.

Along with the adoption of the eligibility rules at the next meeting date, which will be announced soon, a new president will be elected.

While Walt Brown, Spurgeon Chandler and Jack LaRocca were pitching effectively in the pinches, although touched for nine hits by the Bees, Gehrig swung into action by playing the full game at first base, getting one hit, a single, and driving in two runs.

Although held to six safeties by Carl Fischer, Johnny Wyatt and Johnny Heving, the Giants sewed up the game with a two-run splurge in the first inning on a couple of singles, Bruce Campbell's error and Fischer's wild pitch. The Tribe scored its only run in the third when a single, a wild pitch and a low throw to first, both by Hubbell, sent a runner to third, from where "King Carl" forced him in with a walk.

USUAL BALLYHOO STAGED AS STARS PEN SIGNATURES

Larruping Lou Says He'll Add 154 More Games To His Playing Record

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 20.—(AP)—Lou Gehrig is all set to do $36,000 worth of first-basing for the New York Yankees this season.

With Joe DiMaggio, young outfield star, sharing the stage with him, Gehrig brought down the curtain on his holdout drama today by signing his 1937 contract with the world champions of baseball. The contract calls for a stipend of $36,000, making him the highest paid player in baseball.

Gehrig also received a personal check for $750 from Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, as a "gift" for affixing his signature to the document.

DiMaggio, who came to terms last week, signed with Gehrig. The young outfielder will receive $15,000, a raise of $6,500 over his 1936 salary. DiMaggio's new contract is believed to be the juiciest ever signed by a recruit player for his second season in the majors.

Gehrig's 1937 salary is an increase of $5,000 over what he received in 1936.

Gehrig intends to continue his streak of consecutive games with the Yankees which already has passed the 1,800 mark.

"I'll be in there for 154 more ball games this year," he said. "I never felt better in my life."

The signing of Gehrig and DiMaggio was accompanied by the fanfare that marked the signing of Babe Ruth in the heyday of the home run king. The two sluggers, with Colonel Ruppert and Manager Joe McCarthy completing the party, met in the cocktail lounge of the hotel where the Yankees make their spring headquarters. Newspaper and newsreel cameras recorded the scene.

Only Red Ruffing, burly right-hander who won 20 games for New York last season, is unsigned. Ruffing had refused the Yankees' offer of $15,000, an increase of $3,000 over his 1936 pay check, demanding $1,000 additional for his pinch-hitting.

Both Gehrig and DiMaggio appeared in the Yankee lineup today as the world champions defeated the Boston Bees. DiMaggio, as a pinch-hitter, singled through his brother, Vincent, playing third base for the Bees. Gehrig got one hit, a single, playing the entire game at first base.

SMITH AND HAAS LOSE SEMI-FINAL

Picard's Putt Beats Freddie And Horton On Extra Hole Of Pro-Amateur

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 20.—(AP)—Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., stylist, dropped a long putt today to break up an extra hole match and enter the finals of the $3,000 Amateur-Professional Best Ball Golf tournament along with his partner, Frank Ford of Charleston, S. C.

Opposing the Picard-Ford team in the 36-hole finals tomorrow will be Jimmy Hines of Garden City, L. I., and Mark Stuart of New York.

Both semi-final matches were exhibitions of near-flawless golf.

Matching stroke for stroke with Picard and Ford, Horton Smith of Chicago and Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans were even after the first 18 holes and Haas sank a 25-foot putt to square the match on the 36th.

Picard planted his second shot on the first extra hole to within eight feet of the pin and calmly made good his first putt. Smith and Haas could do no better than par 4s.

Harry Cooper of Chicago and Paul Leslie of Baton Rouge, La., gave Hines and Stuart a merry tussle all the way. Leslie sank a 25-foot putt on the 35th to prolong the encounter but his team could not overcome the one-stroke deficit on the last hole.

Both the Picard-Ford and Smith-Haas combinations were 10 strokes under par for 36 holes. Each had 18 hole rounds of 68-66—134. Hines and Stuart fired a 68-67—135 while Cooper and Leslie turned in a 69-67—136.

Hines was a member of the winning team in 1935, the first year the tournament was held. Picard and his partner, then Jack Cummings of Cleveland, lost to Gene Sarazen and Mallie Reynolds in the finals last year.

The defenders dropped out in the second round this year.

Picard won the third hole of the afternoon with a birdie three and took the seventh with an eagle three. Smith captured the 15th for his side by shooting a birdie four.

The opposing amateurs, Stuart and Leslie, did yeoman work for their respective teams going out this afternoon. Leslie took the fourth with an eagle three and followed with a winning birdie three on the sixth. Stuart carded an eagle three on the seventh to pull Hines and himself even.

Cooper won the 10th with a par four, but Hines squared the match with a birdie three on the 11th. Both Cooper and Leslie went over par on the 13th and the lapse cost them the match.

Harry Vardon, Dean Of English Golfers, Dies

Demise Of Veteran Recalls Many Golf Feats He Accomplished

By Gayle Talbot

LONDON, March 20.—(AP)—Harry Vardon, who never took a golf lesson in his life yet ranks jointly with Bobby Jones as one of the two greatest masters the game ever produced, died at his home in Whetstone, Middlesex, today, at the age of 66.

Death resulted from a chill Vardon contracted Wednesday evening while walking around the South Herts golf course which only six years ago he shot in 67 strokes.

His passing removed the only player whom English and Scottish adherents of the game ever were willing to mention in the same breath with Jones. They still are undecided which was the greater.

Many of those who loved Vardon in his prime while he was winning six British Opens and who then watched Jones' effortless perfection a generation later never have been willing to take sides.

Vardon started playing when he was 15 at Grouville, Jersey, where he was born. Where Jones had the advantage of the best equipment available and talented coaching, Vardon learned his famous grip and swing by himself. Vardon first played with a rubber ball and a "club" cut from a hedge.

He won his first open at Muirfield in 1896 with the old Gutta ball and repeated in 1898, 1899, 1903, 1911, and 1914.

He captured the United States Open in 1900 and, 13 years later, tied Ted Ray of England and Francis Ouimet of Boston for first place only to see the sensational youngster, Ouimet, win out in the play-off. In 1920 he finished second to Ray in the American Open at the Inverness club, Toledo. He was a member of the Ryder Cup team in 1921. In all he won 62 first-class championships.

While his game was well-rounded, Vardon will remain famous principally for his beautiful iron shots which those who watched him during his best years say never will be equalled. He gained the reputation of being an indifferent putter but his admirers declare this was exaggerated.

Around 1900 Vardon was invincible and broke record after record wherever he played. Brother professionals said he never was off the fairway during that spell.

His success with the over-lapping or "Vardon grip" made everybody follow his style.

His favorite club was the cleek which he used almost to the exclusion of the brassie. He was one of the first golfers to wear plus fours. Like Jones he was admired as much for his personal magnetism as for his great game.

One of his last recorded appearances in championship play came in the 1927 Open at St. Andrews which Jones won with what then was a record total of 285.

The fickle public—even at St. Andrews—had forgotten him as it paid worshipful allegiance to the glamorous Bobby. Five thousand of them followed Bobby as he played onto the rambling fifth green. Vardon, all alone with his caddy, was playing onto the 14th, a few yards away. As the crowd threatened to over-run his ball, the veteran was seen standing over it and valiantly fighting them off. Nobody recognized him.

MERIDIAN COACH NAMED TO HATTIESBURG STAFF

MERIDIAN, Miss., March 20.—(AP)—Thad "Pie" Vann, football coach and faculty member of the Meridian High school, said today he had resigned, effective at the end of the school year, to become football line coach and a faculty member of State Teachers college, Hattiesburg. His successor here was not announced.

Vann will work with Reed Green, head coach, who succeeded Allison T. "Pooley" Hubert. Hubert resigned last year to become coach at Virginia Military Institute.

Vann was captain of the University of Mississippi football team in 1929. Since his association with the Meridian team it won 72 games, lost 21 and tied seven.

GOON HENRY TO WRESTLE CISTOLDI TUESDAY

TOUGH OPPONENT SIGNED TO MEET BOSTON VILLAIN

Wycoff And Eckert Booked For Semi-Final Of Weekly Stadium Program

[illegible] sensational wrestling in the ring, will be brought here Tuesday night in an effort to tame Angelo Cistoldi, rough Bostonien, in the main event of the weekly wrestling show.

Promoter Paul Lisotta thought he had someone who could stop Cistoldi last week, when he brought Ellis Baker, the Oklahoma "Bad Man" here to meet the Boston villain but Cistoldi won two straight falls and made Baker look like a novice at the game.

Now the Goon has been sent for, and if Cistoldi beats him Lisotta will be ready to concede that Angelo is well nigh unbeatable.

Henry at present is enjoying a winning streak, that includes victories over some of the best and toughest grapplers now operating in these parts. For instance, for three consecutive weeks he has featured the ring cards at Shreveport, and his three victims were Leo Savage, recognized as heavyweight champion in a six man three team states; Bashara and Jim Clark took, in that order. VENZKE CAPTURES MILE RACE WITH CUNNINGHAM OUT

Former Penn Star Beats Poor Field; New York A. C. Wins First Place

NEW YORK, March 20 — (AP) — Glenn Venzke, the former Pennsylvania runner now competing for the New York Athletic club, found the going cost nothing against Glenn Cunningham and Archie San Romani tonight as he won the mile event of the Metropolitan A. A. U. track and field championships in the slow time of 4:20.6.

Competing in his second race in four days after finishing fourth to Cunningham's 4:07 win in the K. of C. meet Wednesday, the veteran "picture runner" of collegiate days was given little trouble by a tired field and won about as he pleased.

Harold Hansen of Columbia, Ernie Stillwell of the Colonial A. C. and K. of C. and Ernest Belcher of the Myrose A. A. former Temple university star, trailed him across the finish without offering any threat. Venzke's victory clinched the title for the New York A. C.

His time of 15:14.6 was more or less [illegible] since no previous time had been recorded for the event. COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—(AP)—Moving up briskly from the early low levels, the cotton market today closed its week with net advances of 5 to 7 points.

An early slump on poor foreign markets that carried prices off around 25 cents a bale at New Orleans did not last.

Trade buying and covering operations more than offset scattered week-end liquidation and the market finished with a steady undertone.

May closed at 13.89, July at 13.76 and the other four positions were quoted at the same figure of 13.22 bid.

The government's final report on the 1936-37 cotton crop was issued today and showed a slight variation from the December 1 estimate.

The final cotton ginning report showed 12,387,403 bales had been processed last season.

General trade news provided nothing unusual. The weather was favorable with exception of the arid northwestern portion. Weekly figures, particularly exports, were good.

Exports today were 4,096 bales.

Cotton futures closed steady at net advances of 5 to 7 points.

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, March 20.—(AP)—Stocks shifted from one foot to the other in today's market, and, except for a few steels, rails and specialties, made little or no progress.

In addition to nervousness over the labor outlook another break in U. S. government securities tended to keep many traders in the safety zones.

Dealings were slow from the start. Transfers for the two-hour proceedings were around 600,000 shares.

Helpful to the steels were estimates mill activities in the Pittsburgh district next week will start at 93 per cent of capacity, up 3 points at a new post-depression peck.

Bethlehem ran up more than 2 points at the best notwithstanding plans of the Lewis unions to start an organization drive in its plants. U. S. Steel, Crucible and Republic, while far from buoyant, were a bit ahead most of the time.

The automotive division was quiet as federal and state mediators strove to bring about an armistice in the Chrysler strike. "K" rallied at the close.

An early drop in mail order issues reflected further thoughts regarding a possible recession in profits for these organizations in 1937 because of increasing operating expenses.

Bonds were mixed, as were the major commodities.

Tilting forward during the greater part of the session were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Baltimore & Ohio, Illinois Central, International Paper, Remington Rand, Seaboard Oil, Texas Corp., Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Electric Power & Light, Kennecott, Woolworth, U. S. Rubber and Boeing.

Backward were J. I. Case, Deere, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Anaconda, St. Joseph Lead, Standard Oil of N. J., Westinghouse, General Electric, du Pont, Allied Chemical, Southern Railway and Southern Pacific.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, March 20.—(AP)—A one-cent a bushel wheat price advance early today was associated with new reports that the Argentine grain board was alarmed over the heavy wheat exports from that country and might enforce restrictions to safeguard home requirement.

Some traders considered the government report of spring wheat sowing intentions as bullish because the indicated planting area was 3,000,000 acres smaller than a year ago.

Opening 1-4 to 1 cent higher, May 1.36 1-2 to 5-8, July 1.22 3-8 to 3-4, wheat later continued to climb. Corn started 3-8 off to 1-4 up, May 1.09 3-4, July 1.05 1-4 to 3-8, and later held steady.

Wheat closed 2 to 3 points above yesterday's finish, May 1.38 1-4 to 3-8, July 1.24 3-8 to 1-2, and corn was 3-8 to 1 5-8 up, May 1.10 3-8 to 1-2, July 1.06 1-8 to 1-4. Oats gained 3-4 to 1 1-8, rye 1 5-8 to 1 3-4, and provisions were 5 cents off to 3 cents up.

Overproduction Of Cotton Fear Of Agricultural Heads

Federal Department Combatting Visions Of 20 Cent Cotton

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 20.—(Special)—Fighting visions of 20-cent cotton, the department of agriculture is training its big guns on the south in what is almost a frantic effort to prevent vast overproduction this year.

With planting season just coming on, reports and newspaper stories have gone through the south that cotton is due for a sharp rise. Recognizing the cotton farmer as "an optimist at heart," and as being liable to go after higher prices instead of a sure thing in the soil conservation program, the department fears the result will be 5-cent cotton again.

Writing to every extension director in the south, via air mail, C. A. Cobb, director of the southern division of the AAA, declared: "Reports reaching this office from states in the southern region indicate a crisis has been reached in our effort to maintain a balanced production in our major cash crops."

More Seed Obtained

He asked directors to outline the situation and give copies to "every producer in your state before he actually plants his cotton." The department has seen farmers take out enough seed to plant 5,000,000 acres more than last year and fears the consequences may be extremely serious and may ruin all the benefits AAA has brought in the way of higher prices.

The department's action came a week after Benjamin Adler, cotton expert on the New York exchange, had predicted that the commodity "may jump to 20 cents in all primary markets," and added that, although cotton prices have been lagging, the world "has begun to realize the favorable price relationship and has been taking our cotton with avidity."

Following is what the department of agriculture considers dynamite: "Still larger crops of cotton than this past season's near record amount will be needed to keep prices from skyrocketing. Record consumption is reducing carryover to substantial, and few countries have given indication of increase."

Statement Censured

The director based his belief on reported reductions in Argentina and Brazil.

The department censures his statement for not giving a full picture of the cotton situation. First of all, world consumption of American cotton this season (first 6 months) based on reports available has been less than last year. Although domestic consumption is up, the total fell from 6,519,000 bales to 6,145,000 as compared to last year.

Next, the department turned to official reports from all producing countries and found: Indian production is estimated at 4 per cent larger than last year, 12 per cent above the 10-year average; the Egyptian crop is estimated to be a record high of 1,957,000 bales; the southern crop in Brazil will more than offset the small crop in the northern part; the Russian crop will be larger.

Added to this, the world supply of cotton is more than 42,000,000 bales this season, the highest on record with the exception of 1927. World consumption during 1935-36 was 27.4 million bales. The 7,000,000 carry-over of American cotton is 2,000,000 bales above normal.

Old Situation Recalled

"I am afraid advancing prices . . . have caused southern farmers to forget the situation which brought about 5-cent cotton. . . . Because of the seriousness of the situation I am convinced we must make a further special effort to let every farmer in the belt understand that a material increase in cotton acreage this season could easily place cotton producers in a position similar to that in which they found themselves in 1933," Cobb wrote.

The department estimates that more than 2,000,000 more bales can be raised on 5,000,000 acres heretofore removed from production under AAA programs, that enough seed has actually gone out to do so. In getting present prices, AAA brought about reduction in acreage from the 41,000,000 average to last year's 30,932,000 acres. The old acreage, it fears, will bring back the old prices.

Pointing to supplies and consumption of cotton, Director Cobb, wrote: "The world supply and world demand for cotton largely determine the price that American growers receive." He added that consumption during 1936-37 will not equal 1936 production, "which means a larger world carryover of all cotton into the 1937-1938 season."

"The only way we can avoid another season of excessive supplies and low prices is through the wholehearted cooperation of all cotton producers in the agricultural conservation program. Unless farmers help themselves by diverting cotton acreage to soil-conserving crops, there is nothing the government can do to maintain and balance production necessary to obtain reasonable prices," he said.

"Now that we have partly obtained our objective of balanced production and fair prices it is even more important that farmers do not desert the program that has meant so much to their welfare."

BADLY ERODED TRACT TO BE CONVERTED INTO WILD LIFE SANCTUARY

RUSTON, La., March 20.—(Special)—A one-acre plot, so badly eroded and deeply gullied that no plant life grows there, will provide an interesting example of the work being done by the soil conservation service. The plot, located on a farm owned by L. Holmes near here, will be reclaimed and made into a sanctuary for the study of wild life. This means that the plot must be made so productive of vegetation that it will become a haven for wild life.

The extremely eroded condition of the plot was caused by the fact that water drained into a roadside ditch from a field above the plot, and then ran from the ditch over the one-acre plot.

To reclaim the tract and make it a sanctuary for wild life, wire check dams are being constructed in the gullies to prevent further washing away of the soil. Also the gullies are being sodded with Bermuda grass. The water is being stored back for to the extent that less water from the field above has to go through ditches to the one-acre plot, and it is hoped that in a short time the plot will be entirely filled.

Experts of the Louisiana Highway commission have been set out on the plot to care for herds as it grows. In addition, the grass will be harvested and used for hay.

Days Of Old Jerusalem Recalled As Local Residents Observe Palm Sunday

Special Music To Be Rendered At Churches

Extraordinary Novelties Available For Children On Easter Morning; Vacation Trips Being Planned

PALM SUNDAY! We visualize today a throng of pilgrims in Jerusalem watching the early morning sun, flaming above the Mount of Olives and bathing the cream colored walls in reflected glory. The walls are those built by Suleiman the Magnificent 400 years ago. Beyond the city lies the Garden of Gethsemane with its ancient olive trees, its rosemary and its carefully tended flowers. All is peaceful there. On Easter morning steps will be turned toward the garden tomb over which there has long been controversy. No matter what his belief, the pilgrim can stand there and recall a hundred pictures from the New Testament; flocks of sheep and goats, with the shepherds nearby; women drawing water at Mary's well; the sea of Galilee; the synagogue at Capernaum; a string of camels and donkeys resting by the wayside.

The scene is vastly different today from what it was 1,900 years ago, when a man of the people, facing suffering and death, trod a dusty road toward what was perhaps the most sublime event in history.

Kate Allison's lovely, lilting voice will be heard at the Presbyterian church this morning, singing of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem under a canopy of palms held by happy little children.

Estelle Sanders' beautiful soprano will rise above the bass, tenor and alto at the First Methodist church in a glorious anthem having to do with Palm Sunday.

Judging from the work accomplished by the Easter bunny, every good little boy and girl will have chocolate eggs and wool' chicks next Sunday morning. Never have the stores been so well stocked with Easter novelties. The chocolate bunnies are very versatile. Some stand, some sit, some carry Easter baskets and others wear jaunty little Easter hats perched over one ear. All the goodies are wrapped in shimmering ribbon in bales of green paper grass and are selling like hot cakes. If there is a yen for super bunnies there're some mak. of white velour, four feet tall, with expensive price tags.

There was a certain charm about last week's social activities. Mrs. Maurice Frazier's luncheon for instance, with the most delicious food served in the candlelight to twelve guests. A cooling drink in tall sparkling glasses (specialite de la maison) —individual planked filet mignon, luscious strawberries and then demi tasse and the hum of conversation. All of which ... indicates how really divine is Mrs. Frazier's voice—deep and throaty, and suggestive of the great Garbo. She never raises her voice—she doesn't have too, as every one listens when she speaks. Mrs. John Frazier, of Ellwood, [illegible] the Sentiment prompts us to do many inspiration for this delightful inter- things. Lillie Harrington's sentiment lude in a very busy week, is a gracious, lovely person—much too young looking to have a young lady daughter and a twenty year old son. Her clothes are most distinctive——dark, plain models de rigueur for day time wear and beautiful shimmering gowns for the evening. On one occasion she was wearing a black wool model, beautifully tailored with strands of pearls close about the throat.

Mrs. John Lathram's guests are also sharing the spotlight—dined and wined and accepting graciously the favors Monroe hostesses love to bestow. They went off on a little giro to Natchez and south Louisiana where the light of other days still lingers and attracts visitors from here and there when springtime comes.

We were stirred right out of our spring fever day-dreams when we heard that many Monroe people have completed all their plans for summer travel. The S. E. Masurs are off to Paris in May for the International Rotary convention. This event, however, seems of minor importance when compared with the cruise they will enjoy to the North Cape and they won't return home until late August. Such glamorous, far off places, as Sweden and Norway appear on their itinerary.

Ed and Louise Seymour, Charlie and Mai' Wallace are off also for Paris in May but later they will seek the picturesque beauty of the Mediterranean rather than the grandeur of the coast of Norway—land of the midnight sun.

Paris will be gorgeously illuminated and transformed into a veritable fairyland of dazzling color for the Exhibition of Arts and Sciences opening in May. There will be faithful reproductions of all the principal places of interest you have read about since "geography days." Many steamers are already booked solid for the summer rush to Paris.

camellia bush from the gardens of the late Captain McLain (her uncle) to her own garden. Remembering how she loved this particular bush as a child, she arranged for its transplanting when the McLain home recently passed into other hands. Camellias from old gardens in south Louisiana have been successfully transplanted in the Harrington gardens and beautify the landscape as nothing else could ever do. Transplanting of these old bushes is a delicate operation and requires skilled hands. They are lifted from the ground with a derrick and wrapped in burlap to prevent the earth from becoming loosened. If one root is damaged the entire bush is worthless.

Here and there we learned that Anna Grey Noe is suffering from a severe attack of mumps—Arthur Dryburgh will return this week from Chicago where he put over a big business deal—that one of our popular young college girls has been secretly married for several months—that Amos and Frances Smelser are looking over the plans for their new home on Island Drive—that Melba Liner has every moment of her time taken up with a round of prenuptial affairs until she says "I do" at Lakeside Country club on the night of April 10—that Louise Williams will soon be mingling with friends again after spending one month in bed for a rest cure.

Study Club Holds Regular Meeting

Mrs. Neal McHenry entertained the Study club at its regular semi-monthly meeting Wednesday. "The Book of the Year" was the subject of the afternoon's program. Mrs. Aylmer Montgomery selected as the outstanding book, "Gone With the Wind." She gave a most interesting and delightful review of this popular novel.

Mrs. Montgomery quoted Stephen Vincent Benet on Scarlett: "She will always be an outstanding figure in American fiction. Lacking in all the virtues except courage, she possessed a backbone of supple steel bending everybody on Tara plantation to her will. We see her first in the ruthlessness of youth and last bruised and crushed, but still trying to bend life to her will."

As to Rhett Butler, Mrs. Montgomery stated he was a combination of St. Elmo and the Count of Monte Cristo. Quoting J. Donald Adams she said: "Rhett Butler is a stock figure of melodrama; a man with a black mustache, a piercing eye and a way with women."

At the conclusion of the program delicious refreshments were served to the following members: Mesdames David Garrett, Henry Montgomery, Aylmer Montgomery, Alfred Reid, Elmer Richards, Elmer Slagle, Eugene Flournoy, H. H. Lard, William Rodriguez, C. C. Brandman, James Drew, Lewis Slator and Carl McHenry.

Miss Helda Isabelle, student at Dodd college, Shreveport, has many friends in this city who will be interested in her proposed trip to Honduras to be conducted under the auspices of Dodd college. She will sail March 24 from New Orleans on board one of the United Fruit company's steamers. Two days will be spent in the historic cities of Puerto Cortez and Puerto Barrios. From Puerto Barrios, the group will travel inland by a narrow gauge railroad through the lush banana plantations into the mountains. There they will be met by a convoy of automobiles and will explore some of the old Mayan cities, prize evidence of the richest culture and civilization of the Americas before the advent of the white man. The most enjoyable feature of the trip will be the gay, stimulating life aboard ship in the waters of the tropics.

Choice Of Costumes Difficult Problem

The filming of "Gone With the Wind," the most widely read novel of the year, is a matter of universal interest. At the very outset, the designer of costumes for this picture faced a vital decision. Should he dress Scarlett and Melanie and other women in the story in the clothes they actually wore during the lean years of the blockade during the War Between the States? Or should he accede to warm southern opinion and design gowns of satin instead of homespun, topped with French bonnets rather than the corn-husk hats worn by Atlanta's elite during the troubled sixties?

Back in Culver City after an extensive research journey to the regions described in Margaret Mitchell's best-seller, the costume designer long ago made his basic decision. Costuming for David O. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind" will be as authentic as it lies within the power of this ace designer to make it.

Somewhat unexpectedly, such an authority as Author Mitchell herself agrees heartily. Sharing her opinion are the astute secretary of the Atlanta Historical society and other leaders of southern opinion.

Opposed are hundreds, even thousands, of southern women who have taken the novel in toto into their hearts, fear any deviation from their cherished picture of the old south. And it isn't a picture of belles in homespun, either!

In Atlanta, where the designer spent several days, he was besieged by phone calls. All the ladies with the slow, pretty voices said the same thing: they had "a beautiful satin wedding gown that belonged to my mother, and the designer simply must see it."

But I'm not in the least interested in beautiful satin wedding gowns," he protested.

"A dress of homespun, now, that would be different," he added hopefully to the wedding gown ladies and invariably was answered by little cries of horror. Scarlet in homespun impossible! At last the distraught ladies compromised with, "You must be talking about Prissy's dress. Quite willing were they that the frivolous little slave should wear homespun.

Unshaken, the designer visited the Charleston museum, was allowed to cut samples from the seams of homespun garments. These will be turned over to southern California hand weavers for exact reproduction. Incidentally, the rebel armies were not composed of boys in gray after the early months of the war. Scarcity of dyes made a shade verging on khaki dominant, the designer discovered.

Picturesque indeed were the uniforms worn by ardent rebel youth of the state's legendary. Boys in various regiments, colleges, organized their own troops patterned along fraternity lines, and chose their own uniforms. And they were dispatch's costume-minded, those young blades in their Zouave bolleros and their gold-braided Hussar styles.

With the world, and particularly the south, busily casting its favorites in the leading roles, Selznick himself has made no announcement of the lucky players. To date, sole executive decisions are that George Cukor will direct "Gone With the Wind." Sidney Howard will do the screen story and Walter Plunkett the costumes. Filming will start in May.

Rodney J. Hobbs Auxiliary Meets

Mrs. Lena M. Morrow, president of the Rodney J. Hobbs auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has just received a bulletin issued by national headquarters of the ladies auxiliary in which they report activities for the month of February.

In addition to donations from auxiliaries all over the United States the national auxiliary gave $500 to the American Red Cross to aid in the recent flood disaster.

February 12, National Conductress Catherin Boland placed a wreath on Lincoln's tomb in Springfield, Ill., and Department President Roberta Fawcett of the District of Columbia placed in wreath on Washington's tomb in Mt. Vernon, February 22. These wreaths are significant of gratitude for the service of these men, which the ladies auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars is organized to protect and revere. A wreath was also placed on the mast of the Maine in Arlington cemetery, by Department President Fawcett on February 15.

The departments of Wisconsin and Iowa are to be congratulated. They have erected two more cottages at the national home at Eaton Rapids, Mich. These cottages are now ready for occupancy and another group of children and mothers are finding a home and sustenance through the protective guardianship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and auxiliaries.

This home, the pride of all V. F. W. posts and auxiliaries, is maintained exclusively by the organization and hundreds of little children, who otherwise would be homeless, are given the advantages of a normal home life.

This is only one of the many worthwhile programs of the organization and women who are eligible are urged to join and assist in this work.

The next regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held Thursday night, March 25. All members are asked to be present.

Attractive Visitors Get Much Attention

Mrs. Horuff Entertains For Mrs. Frazier; Miss Roberts Feted By Mrs. Milling Bernstein

Attractive visitors in the city continue to engage the interest of society with informal luncheons, bridge affairs and supper parties arranged in their honor, appearing on last week's calendar.

Mrs. Albert Horuff's compliment to Mrs. John Frazier, a charming visitor in the city from Ellwood, Ind., was a bridge affair at her home on North Third street.

Flowers from the gardens of the hostess were placed with lavish hand in the drawing room and library where tables were grouped for bridge.

Mrs. Horuff served her guests a delectable sea food course and coffee at beautifully appointed tables.

Mrs. Frazier received for remembrance from her hostess a gift of French perfume. The gifts for high score and consolation were silk hosiery and toilette accessories.

Blue phlox, yellow calendulas, pink tulips and flowering peach blossoms, overflowing from a handsome epergne formed the the decorative floral theme for Mrs. Henry Bernstein's luncheon table when she entertained complimentary to her attractive niece, Miss Louise Roberts of Alexandria.

Crystal and silver appointments gleamed in the glow of the slender, rainbow colored tapers encircling the table.

Four delicious courses were faultlessly served to Miss Roberts, Mrs. Milling Bernstein, Mrs. Elmer Slagle, Mrs. Jean Madden, Mrs. John Wooten, Mrs. Frances Barringer, Mrs. Thomas Monteilland, Mrs. George Trousdale, Mrs. Rube Stewart, Mrs. S. E. Hues and the hostess.

Miss Beryl Madison's compliment to Miss Roberts was a supper party at the Lotus club Friday night.

Mrs. M. A. McHenry presided over a beautifully appointed, flower-banked table in the main dining room of the Frances hotel, at 1 o'clock on Friday, when she entertained a few intimates at luncheon.

Five delicious courses were faultlessly served to the hostess and her five guests.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ellicott of Baltimore, Md., will arrive to play prominent parts in the historic pageant at Ellicott's Hill on March 30. Mr. Ellicott will unfurl the flag on the exact spot where Andrew Ellicott in 1797 raised it to breeze, delivering the same address.

Life in the old south will be recreated during Easter week. Guests may thrill again to the wonders of the ante-bellum southland as they did through the pages of Margaret Mitchell's stirring drama, "Gone With the Wind," for Natchez, more fortunate than most southern cities, still has intact all of her splendid mansions with their rich heritage of furniture, paintings, silver and draperies, which have been handed down from generation to generation.

Ladies attired in the jewelry and dresses of their great-grandmothers, and gentlemen with sideburns and starched ruffs will welcome visitors in spacious double drawing rooms; little girls in ruffles and pantalettes will romp sedately on shaded lawns attended by the ever present black mammy.

The famous annual Confederate ball and pageant will take place on the evenings of March 29 and 31, and April 2 and 3. Southern barbecue, negro spirituals and other colorful entertainments are offered for the enjoyment of the "pilgrims."

Many of the early settlers of Natchez were educated abroad, and one may see the elaborate French furniture, rich brocade, crystal chandelier and fine china brought here by the wealthy land barons of long ago which have passed down to their descendants for over a century. Mingled with the French hand carved rosewood are many pieces of dainty Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Dimock-Phyfe gilt mirrors, bronze lamps, paintings by Aully, Audubon and others. A visit to Natchez during Easter week will bring a rich reward for those who love the old—for Natchez contains many priceless relics of a golden age that is gone.

Mrs. Morris Speaks On Club Objectives

Speaking to Mrs. T. L. Morris association with the civic side of life in this city that observance of the National Business Women's week would not be complete without her annual radio address delivered in convincing manner and tinged with her own charming personality.

Mrs. Morris gave a most illuminating address last Wednesday evening as follows:

"When the national board of the Business and Professional Women's clubs met last July in Chicago it adopted a program of work for the year throughout the year based upon the slogan, 'The Business Woman as a Citizen.' When we began to plan for National Business Women's week it was decided that the theme for this year could well be used as a basis for the very important work in which our clubs are engaged.

"The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs . . . [illegible] . . . adopted a record which we called the ten year objective. Back in 1921 when our society was starting with the greatest of enthusiasm its program we realized that if we were to survive as individuals and if we were to make a contribution to the thinking and action of our time, we must be trained for economic leadership, and that is what we meant by the 'ten year objective.'

"Our members under the leadership of our national officers and with the 'Independent Woman,' the monthly magazine of our organization, to supply us with the latest economic thinking, applied themselves well to the task. We studied the new social values which have come to be recognized in this country in the past five years. We studied the opportunities for women in the changing social order and we have been able to serve our country, our state, our communities and ourselves.

"When we started down the federation highway, we had several goals. Sometimes we have called a goal 'Better Business Women for a Better Business World' and again we have said 'A High School Education for Every Business Girl.' We are very proud to have the first organization to come to advocate a high school education for every business girl and our faith in this ideal and our contribution to it is attested by the fact that our various clubs have in operation more than 700 educational funds which they loan to high school girls or give as scholarships for high school students as well as for talented individuals who are in need of higher training.

"Comparisons are odious, but I do not believe that many men's organizations have a worthwhile a record of public service. Here is what we have done, worked for and supported the child labor amendment, supported the Sheppard-Towner maternity and infant act, the Cable citizenship bill enabling women to marry foreign-born and keep their American citizenship, have approved the [illegible] . . . federal [illegible] . . . equal pay for equal work, and have supported the Women's Bureau in the Department of Labor. We have supported an equitable and adequate support for the federal bureau of education as well as [illegible] . . . service for women. At present we are working the equal rights amendment which has been prepared for the [illegible] . . . We have our place in all public positions in the light of the needs of the country as a whole and of each of our citizens, men and women alike. For instance, while we are [illegible] . . . work for both men and women. We are for unemployment [illegible] . . . on a merit basis.

"For women in our federation look upon public service as a great career and [illegible] . . . would engage. We feel that the women who hold public office or follow a career service in the government of the state, the city or the [illegible] . . . enter this field only when they have a real calling for it, so that they should be advanced not because they are women but because they are better qualified for the work than others are. Our national program of public [illegible] . . . in this country and we found some things that I feel will interest every one in the radio audience.

"Wings of the Morning," a comedy-drama of suspense and purpose, will be presented by the Speech club of Northeast Center of L. S. U. at the auditorium Tuesday night under the direction of Miss Grace Ingledue.

"Wings of the Morning is essentially a problem play in that a group of dissatisfied people are brought together and are forced by circumstances to realize the course that will bring happiness to them. But it is more than a problem play, for there is a generous sprinkling of romance and thrills—thrills that held the audience breathless as the eccentric old master plunged his equally eccentric home into the blackness of an old mine shaft, trapping the occupants there until fear unmasked the twisted strands of their lives.

Miss Ingledue has selected with splendid discrimination the following cast:

Joyce Calvert	Willie Ethel Cocker
Lee	Maude S. Gill
Marian Powell	Patti Oxley
David Benning	Jimmie Guerriero
Eben Forthright	Dodd Brooks
Tomo De Silvestre	Frank Smith
Carlotta	Mary Emmer Thrash
Benedetta	Alice Marie Wilkins
Effie	Margie McGowen
Mrs. Woolley	Jennie Mae Ford
Mrs. Ellis	Celeste Hart
Trudy	Virginia Husted
Ellen	Marion Horn
Mario Godfrey	Louis Guerriero
Stephen Gordon	Jimmie Needham

The fashionable container for the fashionable gift today is the transparent bandbox, be it in miniature or full size. The bandbox idea is not a new one by any means. It dates back to the days when the bandbox was used to carry the great stuff ruffs or to it hands, important accessories of the elaborate costumes worn by men. The word "bandbox" was born of manly devotion to his personal adornment. That is the reason we still say of a well-dressed man "He looks as if he had just stepped out of a bandbox."

The neck bands were extremely [illegible] . . . They were made of stiffened velvet, silk and satin and edged with flowing lace and were in keeping with the embroidered waistcoats, the velvet knee breeches and the long silk stockings worn by the men of the time. The bandboxes enabled the gallants to keep their neck bands from being crushed when they traveled about the country on their social and political rounds.

But, although devised for men's necessity, women seized them for their vanity. The ladies appropriated the bandbox, enlarged it and made it gayer, but did not change its name. The dictionary still defines a bandbox as a receptacle for hats, but for great grandmother who tied hers to the pommel of her saddle with a silken scarf, it was the equivalent of an overnight bag. Today the grandmother sometimes refers to a hat box as a bandbox, a slip which evokes from the young moderns, "What do you mean—bandbox?"

The prominence of a bandbox in early American life can hardly be exaggerated. It was a time when there was great devotion to dress upon the part of men as well as women. Cocked hats, ruffs, powdered wigs, flowered waistcoats and velvet breeches demanded a deal of luggage. Likewise Gainsborough hats, voluminous gowns and flounced petticoats consumed much space. Strong, light bandboxes were easier to manage in the era of stage coach, canal boat and horseback travel than trunks and chests. Protected by gay cotton bags they added color and impressiveness to the arrival and departure of guests.

Old bandboxes are prized chiefly for their decorations, which were either of wallpaper or thin stout paper made especially for them. The paper was hand-blocked and printed with the vegetable dyes which are our Indian legacy. The colors—China pink, ultramarine blue, Colonial yellow and hemlock green—have retained their pristine brightness to a remarkable degree. The designs reflect the life, manner, customs and politics of the period. From them many of the most charming designs of modern wall paper have been copied.

Mrs. Wilbur Royster completed a visit in the home of her mother, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin and her sister, Mrs. Gladys Sperry, and returned to her home in North Raleigh, N. C., Friday night, accompanied by her daughter, Saravette.

Art Exhibit To Receive Much Attention In City This Week

Honorary Sponsors For Display Named

More Than 400 Pictures Culled From 4,000 Will Be Seen At Barkdull Faulk School Beginning Thursday

Art appreciation is steadily growing in Monroe as manifested in the numerous exhibits and the enthusiasm with which they are received.

The art exhibit at the Barkdull Faulk school next Thursday will be an innovation with 400 pictures culled from the 4,000 sent in from schools of North America shown at this time.

The exhibit sponsored by the P.-T. A. embraces pictures first shown in the R. C. A. building, Rockefeller Center, New York, by the Associated Experimental schools in November, 1935. There had been shown in 1934 the international exhibition of children's painting which did not include American children's work, and the exhibition at the R. C. A. building in 1935 was made by the Associated Experimental schools to demonstrate the art work of the children of North America between the ages of 5 and 15 years. Some of the schools sending pictures for the exhibit were Apache schools, Apache tribe, Arizona; Cherokee school, Cherokee tribe, Oklahoma; Ethical Culture, New York; Escuela Altamerano, Mexico, Hanahanoh school, Honolulu; Horace Mann school, New York City; Pueblo school, Mexico; Toronto Art gallery, Toronto, Canada; Vancouver Art gallery, Vancouver.

This innovation in art exhibition is expected to arouse keen interest in parents and educators who will want to see what children are able to express when given a free rein for their accomplishment without the ideas and knowledge of adults being superimposed upon them.

Mrs. Matthews and the members of her committee are planning the hours for the exhibit so the public may take advantage of it. There will be a receiving committee every day of the exhibit from 9 to 6 o'clock. On Sunday, March 28, from 2 to 6 o'clock, the exhibit will be open for the benefit of out-of-town teachers who are interested. On Monday evening, March 29, from 7:30 to 9:30, the committee plans an open house for the public at large with music by the school bands, glee club and piano students.

The art committee of the P.-T. A. has named as honorary sponsors of the exhibit: Superintendent E. L. Neville, Miss Louise Moore, Dr. S. A. Caldwell, Mrs. Dorothy Mengis Grant, Mrs. G. B. Cooley, Mrs. H. M. James, Mr. Joe Craig, Mrs. Dean Selig, Mr. George Wesley Smith, Miss Myrtle Rodgers, Miss Madie Moore, Miss Kathryn Key, Mrs. W. H. Vincent, Mrs. Paul Neal.

Zimbalist To Appear In Monroe March 28

This city will be included in the twenty-fifth anniversary tour which will carry Efrem Zimbalist from coast-to-coast this season. His local visit is scheduled for March 28.

The eminent violinist made his American debut just a quarter of a century ago, and throughout the country he thousands of admirers are uniting to do him special honor.

Zimbalist was first heard by an American audience on October 27, 1911, when he appeared as guest soloist with the Boston Symphony orchestra. On that occasion he played the Glazounow Concerto in A Minor for the first time in America. He was immediately hailed as an artist of exceptional merit. In the twenty-five years that have passed since then the name of Zimbalist has become synonymous with great violin music. He has played in practically every large city in the world.

In the period since his American debut, he has also established himself as a composer and more recently as a conductor. He is the composer of a symphonic poem "Daphnis and Chloe" which was recently performed for the first time by the Philadelphia orchestra with Leopold Stokowski conducting. He is also the composer of an operetta "Honeydew", a sonata for violin and piano in G Minor, three Slavic dances and numerous short violin compositions. Two years ago he made his debut as a conductor by a performance of Tschaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin" which was presented by the art of musical Russia. More recently he conducted the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a performance of his most recent work "An American Rhapsody."

Zimbalist came out of Russia at seventeen to rise to the heights of a violin lover. He thinks America need have little fear of a dearth of violin artists.

"There are many promising young violinists of whom you will hear much later," said the violinist in a recent interview. He scoffs at reports that appreciation for classic music is dying. "People are clamoring to the classics," he said, "and the works of the masters will always have audiences."

He has no preference among the compositions he plays.

"My programs vary," he said with characteristic engineering smile. I play both the light and the serious numbers with equal zest."

Tribute Paid To Miss Lida Benton

A fitting tribute to Miss Lida Benton, oldest of Monroe's living teachers for whom the Lida Benton Grammar school was named, was given Miss Benton by the Lida Benton Parent-Teacher association last Tuesday on the anniversary of Miss Benton's 77th birthday.

At the close of the program and business session, a delightful social hour was enjoyed in the cafeteria. A beautiful birthday cake, embossed in white and green shamrocks, was cut by Miss Benton and served with tea by the hospitality committee.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. G. C. McAuliffe, president, and two numbers in folk dances were given by pupil of the seventh grade. The school band played two selections under the direction of Mr. Charles Gaushell.

Reports from various committees were read, and Mrs. McAuliffe was selected as a delegate to the convention to be held at Shreveport April 15, 16 and 17. Mrs. L. L. Cash was chosen first alternate and Mrs. Harry Stein was named second alternate.

An appreciation talk on "Books as Building Stones" was given by Mrs. Flanders, Miss Madie Moore, school principal, also announced that an art exhibit would be held in the school auditorium in the near future, and that arrangements were already being completed for the exhibit.

Edwards; "Do Movies Pictures Develop Good Taste" Mrs. B. Welch; "How Can We Help Children to Show Good Taste in the Selection of Friends?" Mrs. J. D. Calhoun.

In announcing the program, Mrs. Brown said in part:

"Good taste implies suitability; use of the right thing in the right place. No child's standard is considered or should be considered. Parents should not be too much worried in these years but should provide opportunities for comparisons and exercise of choice. Good taste is acquired; it is a matter of educating her eye and ear and developing her judgment."

Bus Service To Be Extended

At the request of a committee appointed by Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, president of the Neville High School Parent-Teacher association, additional bus service will be furnished students of the Neville High school at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Members of the association feeling that the one bus used for students was insufficient for the number of students obliged to use it, conferred with W. H. D. Rodriguez, finance commissioner, upon the feasibility of supplying an additional bus for the students at that time.

A plan was worked out by Mr. Rodriguez and a committee headed by Mrs. William Mintz, whereby the regular Loop road bus will detour from its regular route at 3:30 in the afternoon, leaving North Third street on Forsythe avenue and running directly to the school, picking up the students and returning by the same route to North Third and on to town. This plan will give two buses for the convenience of the students in the afternoon when they are dismissed from school.

Buses stopping at the school will stop at the front entrance of the school instead of the corner as heretofore.

The plan will be tried out for several days and will be made permanent if it proves satisfactory.

Mrs. Couch Addresses Lake Providence P.-T. A.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., March 20 (Special)—Mrs. C. L. Couch of Monroe, president of the Fifth District Parent-Teacher association, delivered an address on the subject, "Goals of the P.-T. A." at a monthly meeting of the Lake Providence P.-T. A. held Friday at the St. Patrick's school.

Mrs. Couch asked her audience to take stock of themselves as individuals and as an organization and to ascertain to what extent they have met the challenge of the work and service to which the P.-T. A. is dedicated. The advocating of such an inventory came at an appropriate time because the current year of P.-T. A. activities is now closing and a new year of work will begin April 1.

"Has our work been worth the days and months of continuous association—has it been worth the time that might have been devoted to other pursuits?" Mrs. Couch asked.

"Ask what we will, we may be assured that these same questions confronted the founders of our organization. It was not easy for them, as it is not easy for us, to carry the torch for others.

"Many difficulties have arisen in the past; difficulties seeming were hard to overcome, yet the ideals of our founders were so powerful, and so all compelling as to outweigh them."

How near the P.-T. A. is to answering the challenge before the organization may be judged by the goals of the P.-T. A. Mrs. Couch next devoted a portion of her address to a discussion of the goals.

The speaker in closing thanked the Lake Providence unit for the cooperation it had extended to herself and other district officers during the year and commended the excellent record of the unit. She reported that every P.-T. A. unit in the district has made progress during the past year in its various activities.

Mrs. A. L. Price of Winnsboro, associate district president, also gave an address before the meeting here. She spoke on the subject, "Why a P.-T. A."

The district officers and local officers were guests of Mrs. J. Marion Hamlett, vice-president of the Lake Providence P.-T. A., at a bridge luncheon at the Hamlett home.

Mass Planting Of Polyantha Roses Done Under Sponsorship Of Garden Club

Monroe Transformed Into Flower Kingdom

Hundreds Of Bushes Placed In Conspicuous Spots All Over City; Many Residents Cooperate

When the Great Master finished His painting some of the colors that were left over must have dropped down on Monroe, for nowhere on earth does the springtime bring a greater riot of colors.

Monroe is now a flowery little kingdom, encompassed about with flowering trees and shrubs of every size and hue. Additional beauty will be created when the polyantha roses, now being planted in Monroe in wholesale lots, commence to bloom.

Monroe Garden club members comprising a group of enthusiastic women who have come to realize the importance of flowers, are sponsoring the mass planting of the polyanthas. Through the efforts of garden club members, flowers once considered a luxury have now become a need of the masses. Now as never before they serve to express thoughts and sentiments.

The development of flowers through the ages tells of a world constantly growing more fit to live in. The past fews years have seen a steadily increasing interest in the culture of flowers in this city, due in a measure to the work being accomplished under the banner of the Monroe Garden club.

The chief project at the present moment is the mass planting of polyantha roses in public parks, city school grounds, private home gardens, and in fact at every vantage point throughout the length and breadth of the city. Realizing that only in mass planting can the city reach that state of perfection so greatly desired by beauty lovers, supporters of the movement have pushed it to the fullest extent. City officials have cooperated with members of the garden club to such an extent that hundreds of polyantha rose bushes have been planted in the city parks and public grounds.

Mrs. John Breard, civic chairman of the club, assisted by members of her committee, supervised the planting of roses on the parish courthouse grounds.

Mrs. John R. Wooten supervised the planting of polyanthas along the sea wall on South Grand street.

Mrs. F. A. Reynolds is now busily engaged in supervising the planting of the Hayes Lumber company's grounds in West Monroe.

Mass planting of polyanthas ranging from 50 to 100 shrubs has just been completed by the following: Mrs. Sig Mayer, Mrs. Henry Biedenharn, Mrs. T. C. Rowland, Mrs. John Breard, Mrs. John Fox, Mr. H. K. Tomlinson, Mrs. J. R. Wooten, Mr. Ted Madsen, Mrs. Arthur Dryburgh, Mrs. W. B. Clarke, Mrs. Fennel Murphy of Farmerville, Mr. Walter Mangham, Mrs. Mary Millsaps, Mrs. L. N. Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

TESTS show that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath! Tests also prove that most bad breath comes from improperly cleaned teeth! Decaying food deposits, in hidden crevices between the teeth, are the source of most bad breath . . . of dull, dingy teeth . . . and of much tooth decay.

Ordinary cleaning methods, which merely polish exposed surfaces, fail to remove these odor-breeding deposits. But Colgate Dental Cream, with its special penetrating foam, gets into every tiny crevice—emulsifies and washes away the food and acid deposits that cause bad breath.

And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens the enamel—makes your teeth sparkle!

So brush your teeth, gums, tongue, with Colgate Dental Cream at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth and a sweeter, purer breath. Why not get a tube today!

CHAPTER XLIV

In the kitchen Allan was making progress slowly. He smiled as he bent over the stove and moved uncertainly about the room. Ann was a little witch, he thought, masking an entirely different personality under her nun-like attitude.

A plate slipped from his nervous fingers and crashed to the floor. He called, "Guess you'd better help me dish up. I'm breaking all the china."

There was no answer. He waited a moment and called again, "Say, Ann, you never did have that cocktail. Want one now?"

Still no answer. At the same moment he felt a rush of cold air. A door must be open. A door—

Allan ran to the hall. A black expanse met his bewildered gaze. The front door was wide. He could see the dark outline of the trees, branches swaying near the porch. His hands felt for the switch. He cursed softly. So that was why she had wanted supper! Well, she couldn't get far with this game.

A quick survey convinced him that Ann was really gone. He would find her, he thought furiously. It would have been better for her if she hadn't played him a trick like this. It would be only a matter of minutes before his car would cover the distance and he would bring her back.

Ann crouched behind tall shrubbery near the sun porch, heard him driving away. As soon as the sound of the motor died she opened the door, removed her wet coat and hat, putting them on a chair in the hall and called a taxi company.

"I want a cab sent in a hurry to the Ingleside section. You know where it is?"

"Sure, lady. What street?"

"No. 44 Cherry Circle. Write it down, please. I'm in a great hurry."

"I have it. Forty-four Cherry."

"It's the fourth house after you turn in from town. Back among some trees."

"I think I know the place. Anyway I'll find it."

"How long will it take you to get here?"

"It's a half hour run."

"Please hurry."

"Okay, lady."

Ann closed the door. She turned out the lights in the hall, turned on more lights in the living room, went back into her old room and turned on a light by the dressing table.

It was fully 20 minutes before Allan returned. He had finally given up the search. He could look all night, cruising about among trees that lined the highways and still not find Ann. How she could have gotten away so quickly was a mystery. He was raging angry, wet and cold.

The door was shut. Between the drawn shades in a room on the left wing was a thin yellow streak. A light in Ann's room. The front door was locked. Allan rang the bell angrily.

Ann opened the door. "Allan, where in the world did you go? I heard you dashing away in the car—"

"Where were you—hiding from me, weren't you?" He caught her roughly by the shoulders.

"Don't be silly. Why should I hide? I was back in my room doing things to my face. I ran to the front door and called you but I guess you didn't hear."

He was still staring at her suspiciously. "No tricks, Ann. If I thought—"

Ann said gently, slipping her arm through his. "You've been drinking too much. It's made you imagine foolish things. Is my supper ready? I suppose I shall have to heat the coffee again."

She was leading him with an insistent little pressure against his arm to the kitchen.

"Everything's ruined," he grumbled. "And all my fault. I suppose because I went to powder my nose." Ann said lightly.

"Well, let's forget it."

"Take off your wet coat, Allan." Oh, she was glad to get him away from the hall where her own soaked coat and hat were.

He poured two drinks. Ann sipped her own and then, feeling his eyes upon her finished the drink quickly.

"Want another?"

"Later. I'm going to scramble more eggs if you don't mind. I never could eat cold eggs."

He had slumped down in a chair, watching her gloomily as she mixed the eggs in a bowl and whipped them steadily.

She turned to the stove, stirred them into a hot skillet. Oh, why didn't the taxi come? It must be all of a half hour. If her plan failed in the end—but no, it must not fail. It couldn't fail. The driver had understood perfectly.

She went into the breakfast room, got a cloth and napkins and came back.

"A lot of fuss," Allan said, "over a little food. Let's cut the frills."

Ann, spreading the cloth, smiled at him. "There's nothing to hurry about and I like the table to look nice."

There was the taxi coming up the drive. Allan had not heard it. His head had dropped to his arms, on the table.

"I forgot the silver. Will you please get some?"

He got to his feet and staggered into the dining room. "For heaven's sake, Ann—"

She flew to the front door, grabbing her hat and coat on the way. The driver had reached the door. In another moment he would have pressed the bell. He helped Ann into the cab, darkness, rain beating fiercely against the windows.

* * *

The driver leaned back, turning his head slightly. "Where to, miss?"

After a moment the girl answered in a husky tone, "Do you know where Roland street is?"

Roland street. He had to think a moment. "It's on the east side of town."

He remembered now. It was an old street filled with cheap brick apartment buildings. "I think I know where it is."

Ann couldn't bear going back to the dreary, lonely apartment just then. Sheila was out with Jimmy. It would be several hours before she returned. She felt faint at the thought of the place. Maybe she would feel better if she stopped at the drug store on the corner and had some hot chocolate.

The taxi was nearing Roland street. "Please let me out at the drug store on the corner," Ann said.

The cab driver halted at the curb and Ann got out. She opened her purse. Luckily she had enough to pay the fare. She counted out the money and handed it to the driver. He was staring at her, a queer expression in his eyes.

Well, she must look strange with the wet coat clinging to her, her eyes red from crying.

She went into the drug store.

The taxi driver continued to stare at Ann's retreating back. Yes sir, there wasn't a doubt! This was the same girl he had driven away from that swell apartment. Young Peter Kendall's wife.

He was excited. He followed Ann and saw her sitting at a table in the corner. "Won't you want a cab to go home in, Miss. I can wait."

"No, thank you. I live near here."

He went away, but not far. He stopped in the next block and telephoned police headquarters. Detective Shannon answered.

"I've got the girl you were looking for," the cab driver reported. "The wife of that millionaire. She's in a drug store at the corner of Constance and Roland streets. Yes, I'll follow her and meet you at the drug store in a few minutes."

He went back to the drug store. Ann had disappeared.

DON'T DO
THESE THINGS
DON'T admit strangers into your home unless you are convinced they are representatives of a reliable concern.
DON'T sign contracts which strangers offer unless you are positive the representative offering the contract is from a reliable concern.
DON'T hire servants until you are assured through investigation that they are honest and bear good records.
DON'T cash checks for strangers, you have no way of knowing their worth or worthlessness.
DON'T give strangers too much information about yourself or your neighbors unless you are assured that these strangers are from reliable concerns.

nce upon a time

The old fashioned fairy tales you learned in the nursery or at mama's knee, began with that prosaic and hackneyed phrase . . . "Once upon a time." This phrase today seems to fit the opening of a modern merchandise "fairy story" . . . such as furnishes the theme for the "passing of the representative of unreliable or crooked schemes." In most cases this class of representative can be determined with little effort as he cannot convince a smart house-wife of the reliability of the representative or his concern.

In most cases where there is a crooked scheme presented by strangers, the house-wife is required to sign an order and immediately pay in cash some proportion of the cost of this order. This point should especially be given careful consideration as you may be dealing with a representative that will take your initial payment in cash and never deliver the goods.

There are many reliable representatives that knock at your door to offer you real value in things that you really need and who are in a position to readily establish their identity. In many cases it would be beneficial for you to grant these representatives a hearing as they are people who are trying to lend you a real service in saving you the time of visiting their stores.

EVERY "BELL RINGER" IS NOT A CROOK, THEREFORE YOU SHOULD GIVE THE CALLER AN OPPORTUNITY TO IDENTIFY HIMSELF OR HERSELF, AND WHEN IDENTIFICATIONS ARE PROPERLY MADE, ALLOW AN EXPLANATION OF THE PROPOSITION THAT HE OR SHE HAS TO OFFER.

Bear in mind that it is always well to trade with concerns and representatives of concerns that are located in your own state. By doing this you will be contributing to the welfare and advancement of your own state by keeping as much money as possible at home and will help your business firms of your state to grow and as they grow so will your community and state prosper.

Cooperation is a necessity for rapid advancement in any line and if you will cooperate by spending as much of your money as possible for the necessities of life, you will help to put more money into circulation that in the course of its revolution will better every condition of your community, state and nation.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MONROE AND NORTHEAST LOUISIANA WE URGE THAT YOU BUY NOW AND THEREBY START A PROGRESSIVE MOVEMENT THAT WILL ENABLE OUR STATE TO CONTINUE ITS LEAD IN FINANCIAL, COMMERCIAL AND AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES WHICH IT HAS BEEN SO WELL KNOWN FOR IN THE YEARS THAT HAVE GONE.

FHA ENCOURAGES BUILDING; DOES NOT SELL PLANS

Administration Suggests Utilization Of Services Of Architects

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While the federal housing administration encourages in every possible way the improvement of construction standards and the utilization of the services of competent architects and builders, it does not supply plans or other architectural service to the public.

From the inception of the federal housing administration's program, the construction standards established for projects applying for mutual mortgage insurance, have been published and presented to the public, to builders, and the construction industry as a whole. However, suggestions as to building practices and desirable building standards which we have also developed, have been offered as suggestions and are intended in no way to compete or conflict with the building industry or the architectural profession.

Several private agencies have organized planning services and offer sets of stock plans for public purchase, but these agencies are in no way associated with the federal housing administration and are exclusively private enterprises.

In encouraging the construction of small, low-priced homes the housing administration devised a series of five examples as illustrations of these homes. They were designed purely to show the feasibility and practicability of low-priced home construction. Outside planning groups have seen fit to prepare plans for sale to the public, which are, in design, closely similar to our suggested homes which appeared in Technical Bulletin No. 4. However, the housing administration has never furnished stock plans for any private enterprise. In the case of the demonstration home program now being promoted by the lumber, brick, concrete, and other industries, the federal housing administration has merely acted in a cooperative capacity and is taking no part in furnishing plans or other material. As in all operations, private individuals and groups present their plans for approval if financing under the insured mortgage system is proposed. Aside from studying such plans for approval the housing administration has no other part in the design and specifications entering any building project coming under the federal housing administration's program.

BUYERS PAY LESS RENT FOR HOMES

Survey Shows Family Budgets Save On Rent Under Insured Mortgage

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A survey of the buyers of 30 homes in a development approved by the federal housing administration shows that 90 per cent of the new-home owners are paying less in monthly payments on their insured mortgages than they had previously paid in rent.

In the 30 cases a widely varied list of skilled artisans and workers was recorded as having bought their homes under the federal housing administration's system. It included a letter carrier, bookkeeper, dairyman, painter, policeman, plasterer, electrician, carpenter, restaurant manager, clerk, engineer, and gardener. In one case a man whose annual income is $1,300 is buying his home in monthly payments of $25.06.

The average income of these 30 buyers was found to be $2,067 a year. Statistics show that the average monthly insured mortgage payment is $27.86, and the average amount previously paid for rent was $35.71.

Only Structurally Sound Houses Worth Cost And Time Of Repair

Many old houses that might be supposed to have reached the age of retirement are well worth renovation, if they are structurally sound and in desirable neighborhoods. Funds for such purposes can be obtained under the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration. Often they are larger than necessary for single-family occupancy. Such houses can be arranged quite easily to house two or more families in comfort.

Before going too far in such alterations, however, it is well to examine carefully the structure of the house to make sure that it is in sound condition. Otherwise when the work of rearranging the interior layout gets well under way so much unforeseen work will have to be done that the cost will mount alarmingly.

The first place to look for decay is in the sills that rest on the foundations. If they are sound, it is safe to assume that the balance of the frame is sound. When you are reasonably satisfied that there is little danger from this source, look at the outside trim where it comes near the earth and around the eaves, particularly where the gutters and downspouts are located. Sometimes when gutters have been allowed to sag or have not been kept clean or they have rotted the concentration of water on isolated parts of the trim will cause it to rot. If this rotting has been allowed to go too far, it may have penetrated even to the frame. Needless to say, all rotten wood should be removed and replaced to prevent the spread of the rotting.

Another point of danger is in the chimney. This should be carefully examined to see that there are no cracks or open joints or loose bricks. If there are any indications of weaknesses, the chimney should be rebuilt, and in rebuilding it would be well to install flue linings.

The roof is another place to look for possible deterioration. Wood shingles will not last forever, slate and tile and composition shingles may have broken loose, or paper or felt shingles may have reached the point where they must be replaced.

Flashings should be checked to see if they have corroded or if seams have opened.

If all these points are sound or can be made sound within the budget, then these old houses may be put to work again and made to earn their keep.

CONTRACTS SIGNED FOR NEW PROJECT

Second Large Scale Community Under Construction In Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Final plans for a large-scale housing project to be known as Falkland Properties, Inc., have been approved by the federal housing administration. Contracts for mortgage insurance have been signed by the housing administration and the sponsors.

The property is located at Silver Spring, Md., and the cost of the project will be around $1,100,000. The housing administration has contracted to insure a first mortgage amounting to $840,000.

Approximately 10 acres is included in the tract, and about eight acres will be utilized by tenants as gardens, playgrounds, lawns and wooded park areas. Plans call for the construction of 178 family units in two and three-story semi-fireproof structures, with garages for 28 cars.

Apartments will vary in size from three to six rooms and will range in rental from $43.50 per month for the three-room units to $77 per month for the six-room units. The approximate rental will be $14.50 per room.

Young Men Of Today Should Study Trades

NEW YORK CITY.—Young men of today who are not suited to the professions should study for the trades of electricians, plumbers, masons, iron workers, etc., according to David M. Oltarsh. He points out that the world in the future will need these men so that labor can be better fed.

The expected activity in the field of structural work will create a demand for skilled mechanics, he says.

CRACKS IN FLOORS MAY BE FILLED IN

Wide cracks between the floor boards may be filled in a number of ways. If the cracks are very wide, as is sometimes the case in old houses where wide flooring was used, it may be necessary to put strips of wood in the cracks. In smaller cracks various plastic materials may be used, such as plastic wood, glue and sawdust, putty, and various patented compounds.

Fireproofing In Rooms Lessens Blaze Dangers

In the packing and forwarding of merchandise large quantities of excelsior are ordinarily indispensable.

Materials used in packing wares frequently represent fire hazards.

A large built-in bin in an important merchandising concern contains excelsior. The lid of the bin is held open by a sash weight. Should fire occur a fusible link mounted on the inside of the cover releases the weight, closing the bin and smothering the blaze.

Built-in equipment is eligible under the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration. Funds for the purpose may be obtained from private financial institutions cooperating with the housing administration.

PUBLIC DEMANDS MORE UP-TO-MINUTE STORES

People who are "modernization-minded" are not likely to be attracted to an unprogressive-looking store that lacks an up-to-date appearance. Store modernization may be accomplished by the use of the federal housing administration program which insures loans made by private financial institutions for modernization purposes.

S-W COMPANY TO DISTRIBUTE BOOK

Home Owners In Parish Will Receive Free Copies Of 'Home Decorator'

Five thousand complimentary copies of the home decorator will be distributed this week by the Sherwin-Williams company, 109 Catalpa street, manufacturers and distributors of fine paints and wallpapers, to homes in Monroe, West Monroe and in the rural districts of Ouachita parish, according to an announcement made Sunday by Manager J. F. Davis.

The home decorator is a beautifully prepared volume containing a fund of useful information for the interior and exterior decorating of the home. The book is profusely illustrated with pictures showing the striking effects of different color schemes for all rooms in the home.

Valuable information in connection with the revarnishing of old floors, the painting and enamelling of wood floors, the refinishing of furniture, etc., is contained in the home decorator which should be placed where homeowners can readily refer to it.

The Sherwin-Williams company prepared this book after considerable investigation on the part of a large staff of trained paint and interior decorating experts. It contains much information which can be procured only from the laboratories of such a large paint manufacturing company as the Sherwin-Williams organization, manufacturers of fine paints, lacquers and enamels for about 75 years.

"Our company is proud of the service which it can give through the home decorator pamphlet," Mr. Davis declared. "Every home owner desires to have the very best procurable at the most economical prices. The home decorator will help him to realize this wish. The home decorator is a treasure trove to the amateur home decorator. It contains schemes, plans and directions that are worth their weight in gold. Perhaps just one item in a room decoration will solve a decorating problem that has been as yet unsolved. Descriptions of color combinations that are as thrilling as they are colorful. You don't have to take a course in interior decorating to do your home over. The home decorator will be of invaluable assistance in this pleasurable task," he said.

A group of young ladies will call on home in the Twin Cities, and in the rural communities of Ouachita parish during the coming week to distribute the home decorator which is being given free with the compliments of the Sherwin-Williams company.

CHRYSLER PLANS EASTER PARADE

Willis Announces Special Style Shows Of Cars Until Easter Sunday

Chrysler and Plymouth dealers throughout the country are now making their preparations for the "Chrysler Easter Parade" which starts on March 15 and continues through Easter Sunday, March 28. This is the beginning of an intensive spring sales drive, according to C. E. Willis, local dealer.

The program for the "Easter Parade" comprises special style shows, street parades, free motion picture shows, especially decorated show rooms, street demonstrations etc. Because Easter has long been associated with the renewal of the feminine wardrobe, a special appeal will be made to the fair sex. The subtle suggestion that nobody should be obliged to drive her new finery in an antiquated and ugly motor car but should have transportation worthy of her is expected to stimulate sales materially.

An intensive advertising campaign in which magazines, newspapers, radio and billboards will be used, is scheduled by the Chrysler sales division of the Chrysler corporation for this period. Dealers will be urged to use their local newspapers for insertions of special copy and to buy time on their local radio stations to supplement the national effort. Arthur E. Tongue, Chrysler's director of advertising and sales promotion, reports an enthusiastic response to the project.

Style shows will be conducted in dealers' showrooms with socially-prominent young women modeling gowns and millinery. A street parade also is part of the program, where practicable, with Chrysler and Plymouth cars on floats with plenty of pretty girls for atmosphere.

Motion picture shows will be run in dealers' places, with a program comprising both regulation comedy and travel pictures and interesting new commercial reels prepared for the Chrysler and Plymouth factories.

The head of King Leopold III appears for the first time on a Belgium coin on the new 5-franc piece.

PONTIAC STARTS HEAVY CAMPAIGN

Company's Sales Better Than Ever Before, Says C. P. Simpson

Pontiac sales executives have begun a real drive for increased business for the balance of 1937 and 1938, according to C. P. Simpson, general sales manager.

The company's sales are better than ever before, he points out. Every month since the 1937 car announcement last fall has shown an increase in sales. The first two months this year were 50 per cent ahead of the same months last year. And dealers have sold more cars than they have been able to get.

"These continual increases in sales are fine," said Mr. Simpson. "They are right in line with the trend of the times. But I am sure that even such increases do not begin to represent the maximum possibilities for the sale of Pontiac cars in this country. Public acceptance gives us a right to expect more.

"We are fortunate at this time in being able to produce more cars than at any time in our history, and a considerable increase over previous months since the 1937 announcement. I believe that our ability to obtain an increase in sales depends almost wholly on whether our selling organization is equipped to call on more prospective buyers, make more demonstrations and tell a lot more people about the Pontiac car.

"Our modern plant was built to handle an output of some 400,000 cars annually. All that is required to obtain that production is the necessary tooling up of the machine shops, foundry, sheet metal plants and assembly lines.

"Accordingly, after the splendid acceptance Pontiac experienced during the first three months of the current car model year, advantage was taken of the period when no cars were assembled due to a shortage of materials during the strike, to make changes in our plants and assembly lines. The immediate result is a productive output that is 30 per cent greater than it was before. This will occur months when production should exceed the 30,000 car mark.

"To make sure that our dealers and field organization are prepared to handle this increase promptly and to keep a good backlog of unfilled orders ahead of all times, our principal sales executives have started on a quick survey of the country, holding dealer-action meetings in 20 important cities during a period of four weeks. These meetings will provide the ground work for arrangements that will assure us of an increase in sales that will match the increase in production our plants are in a position to supply."

Purpose of the Pontiac tours are as follow:

Mr. Simpson will be in Washington, D. C. March 3, Philadelphia, March 6, New York City, March 7, Boston, March 8 and Albany, March 10.

D. C. Bell, assistant general sales manager of the company, will leave for inspection in Kansas City, March 4, St. Louis, March 6, Chicago, March 8, Detroit, March 9, Milwaukee, March 10 and Minneapolis, March 11.

J. F. Smith, assistant general sales manager of the company, will leave for inspections in Cleveland, March 4, Pittsburgh, March 5, Cincinnati, March 6, Buffalo, March 7, Rochester, March 8, Syracuse, March 9 and Albany, March 10.

V. L. Mills, assistant general sales manager of the company, will leave for inspections in Kansas City, March 4, St. Louis, March 6, Chicago, March 8, Detroit, March 9, Milwaukee, March 10 and Minneapolis, March 11.

The two assistant sales managers will cover the Rocky Mountain territory.

FORTUNE SMILES ON USED CAR PURCHASER

Of all the millions of people who have bought used cars from Chevrolet dealers, probably few are so well satisfied with their purchase as Roy Kennedy of Kennedale, Ind., who recently bought a used car for $5 from the Universal Chevrolet company at that city. After getting home, he happened to find a dime that had fallen down into the coat lining.

Kennedy is said to be pleased by this lucky find, but he almost passed up when he noticed that the coin was dated 1871. That was a bit unusual. A total of five happened to be in circulation at that time, and the government destroyed all but one. The lucky purchaser of the used car, it is said, has been offered $1,000 for the coin, but refuses to sell it.

FHA FINDS FIFTY PER CENT URBAN FAMILIES RENTERS

Several Millions Of U. S. Inhabitants Live In Multi-Family Houses

WASHINGTON, D. C. [illegible] families of limited means for whom home ownership is impractical, there is now a large immediate demand for construction of new apartments of low and moderate rentals in most cities. There is also a latent demand for modern one-family houses both of the detached type and in rows for rental purposes.

This fact during the present recovery period private capital has been relatively slow in entering these fields. There is a great immediate need for profitable investment in low and medium priced rental housing. Interesting results of the federal housing administration's activities in this field during the year are to be [illegible] in the final January report.

Aged Photographer Recalls Early Days In This Section

John Davis Of Ruston Believed Oldest 'Picture Taker' In The Country

By K. F. Hewins

RUSTON, La., March 20.—Photographer John Green Davis of Ruston was 83 years old Wednesday. At the turn of another fleeting year, he is not exactly as spry as a spring chicken on a red-hot stove; but he can still squeeze the bulb, and does, when his son John is not in the studio. Representatives of photo supply companies say Mr. Davis is the oldest photographer they call upon in their travels over the country.

On his 83rd birthday, Mr. Davis posed in an easy chair and gave a word picture of things that have developed in photography during the nearly 60 years he has been flattering people with their likenesses, making them feel like going to the hospital to be made over, or giving them "the very picture" of themselves.

"A fellow certainly had to believe in evolution to take up photography when I did," Mr. Davis began. "Anyway, the crude picture-making methods of my early days have changed decidedly for the better, and today I doubt whether I could make a picture the way I used to do it, even if I wanted to put myself to all that trouble."

Sixty years ago, the matter of posing the subject was "a pain in the neck." It was necessary for the customer to have the base of the head clamped in a vise and held there from 10 to 20 seconds, and in cases of extremely dark complexion the exposure required as high as 40 seconds.

"It didn't make any difference whether the person batted his eyes," Mr. Davis said, "but the head had to be stationary."

While giving one of those long exposures to a negro in El Dorado, Ark., about 1884, Mr. Davis saw the subject swoon and fall back through a scenic background. When the negro came to, Mr. Davis questioned him about his behavior. "That thing magnetized me," the negro replied. He was posed standing up the next time.

In Mr. Davis' early days, photography was accomplished by the wet plate process. The glass plates were first coated with albumen (whites of eggs) and ether, allowed to dry and placed on the shelf to await their need. When the picture-seeker came in, the coated plate was dipped in nitrate of silver and collodion (an adhesive solution of gun-cotton in ether and alcohol, bromide and iodide). Then the plate, still wet with the solution, was placed in a holder and put in the camera. After the exposure, it was necessary to develop the negative at once. This was done by holding the glass plate carefully by hand and pouring the developing solution from a bottle onto the plate. Then, Mr. Davis said, the plate was heated over an alcohol lamp and dried, after which it was varnished. The next step was retouching, and the customer could see, from the plate, what his picture looked like. No "proofs" were made.

The photographer then required some paper on which to print the picture. The paper was albumenized, treated with silver and fumed with ammonia. The printing was done by sunlight, with the time required depending upon the quality of the negative as well as the brightness of the light.

In the absence of artificial light, most of the "shooting" had to be done between noon and 5 p.m., according to Mr. Davis, who pointed out that "the morning sunlight is not clear, and we had to limit our picture-making to the afternoons."

"Although the whole process was slower than methods of today, it made pictures that lasted," Mr. Davis stated, and thereupon he brought forth a small framed photo which he declared is older than he.

He talked on in technical terms as one who knows from experience and remembers about the progress of photography through the years from "painless" photo-making, high speed cameras, supersensitive panchromatic films and other big dictionary words that have made the business more of a "snap."

Born on a farm five miles north of Farmerville on March 17, 1854, Mr. Davis early learn of the rudiments of necessitated about 10 years of swamp clearing before land could be put in shape for satisfactory farming. In 1878, he heard of a man named Payton Mayo, at Possum Walk, 11 miles north of Farmerville, who was making pictures.

With capital of 50 cents, young Davis went to Possum Walk. He bought a purse with the 50 cents and had nothing left to put in it. After finding Mr. Mayo, however, he soon had something for his wallet.

"I hadn't been there very long," Mr Davis recalled, "when I made $12 in one day. The boys thought I was 'cleaning up,' since most of them were making about $9 a month, or less. I started by making one picture for 50 cents or four for a dollar. The four pictures were made on a sheet of paper 4 1-4x5 inches and we called them 'gems.'"

Presently, the young photographer was ready to leave Possum Walk. He remained "to get a picture of a negro they hanged there on May 24, 1878," and from then on, for several years, Mr. Davis' activities sound like a series of double plays in a baseball game. The summary includes short stops at LaPoeld, Ark., and Bucksnort, Ark., then to Mars' Hill, to Sibley in Lincoln parish, to Arcadia, Mt. Lebanon, Athens and Arcadia again. Subsequently, he "made" Vienna, Farmerville, Summerfield and Blanchard Springs, near Junction City, in 1882.

After working all those towns in succession, he decided "to take an itinerary," he said. So he set out from Blanchard Springs with two tents, one to live in and the other for his studio. He touched at the village of D'Arbonne, and returned to Sibley and Vienna. Then he stopped at Sandsboro for a while, went back to Arcadia and Athens, and took in Tulip and Shiloh.

After that, he headed for Farmerville in 1884, and was married to Miss Ava Thornton in 1885. When business began to "drop off" at Farmerville in 1897, he started on another swing around north Louisiana and was attracted to Ruston's environs by the old Chautauqua, which was convening about two miles north of here. In 1899, he moved in to the town of Ruston with his family and has been here since.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of Mrs. Mae Davis Moore, Denton, Tex.; Mrs. D. S. Culbeau, Ruston, Leon Davis of New Mexico, and John Davis, Jr., of Ruston, who handles most of the studio work here.

Mr. Davis is an ardent crossword puzzle fan. If a puzzle-maker should ask for a five-letter word meaning "the oldest active photographer still in the business," the word might be "Davis."

PHOTOGRAPHER 83

One of the oldest photographers in the business, J. G. Davis, above, of Ruston, celebrated his 83rd birthday Wednesday. He has been making pictures for nearly 60 years, having entered that profession in 1878 at Possum Walk, north of Farmerville. He established his studio in Ruston in 1899, four years after Louisiana Tech opened its doors there. Thousands of students and alumni of the college at Ruston are among the multitude he has photographed.

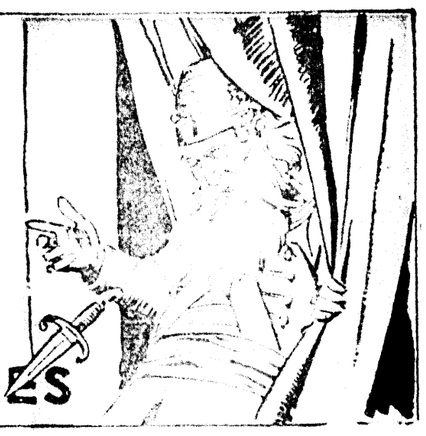
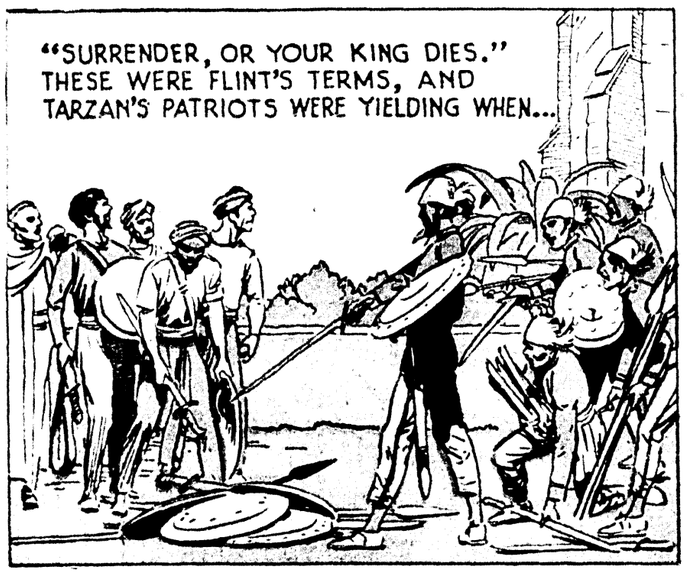
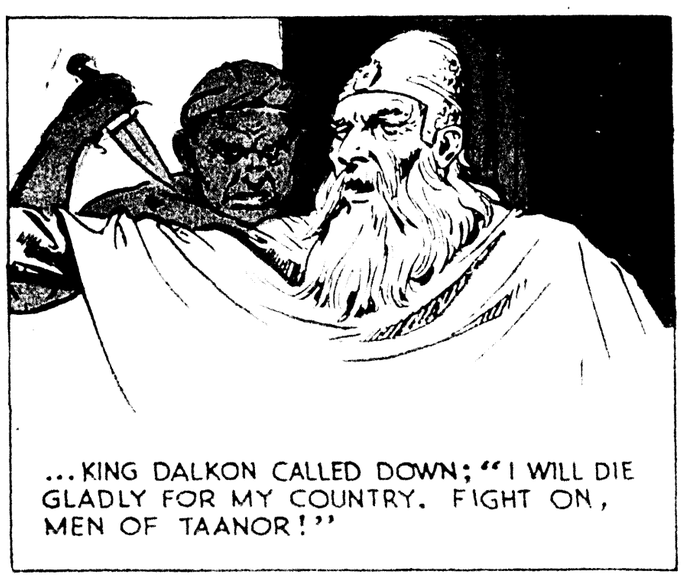
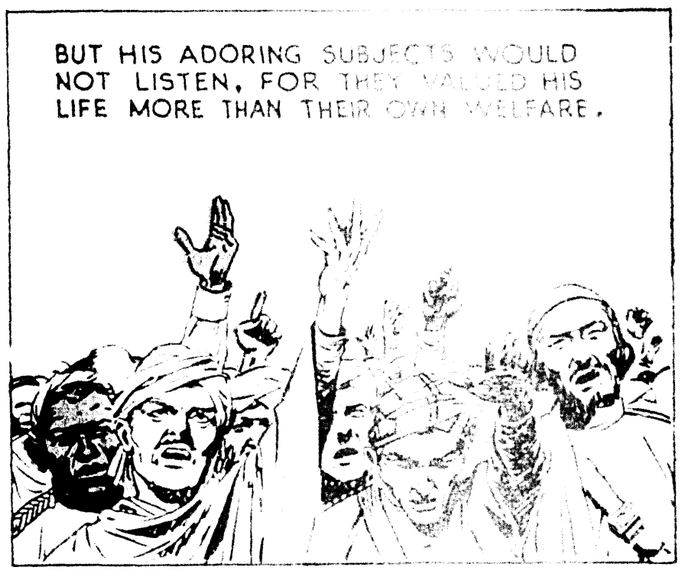
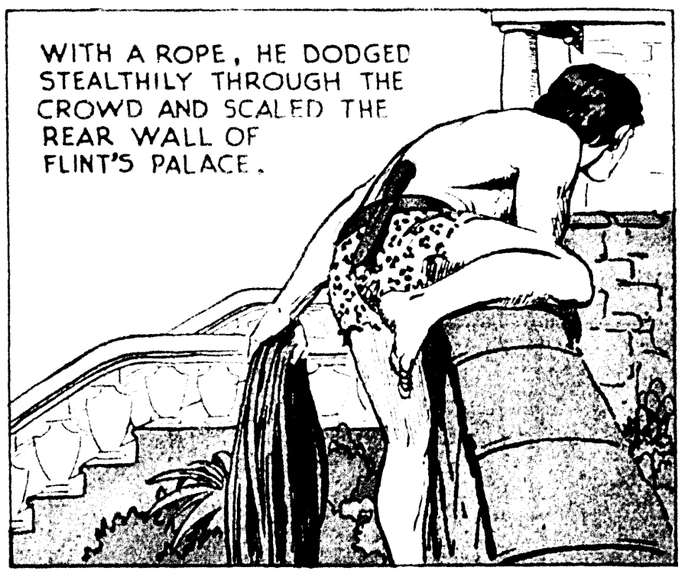
A HERO DIES

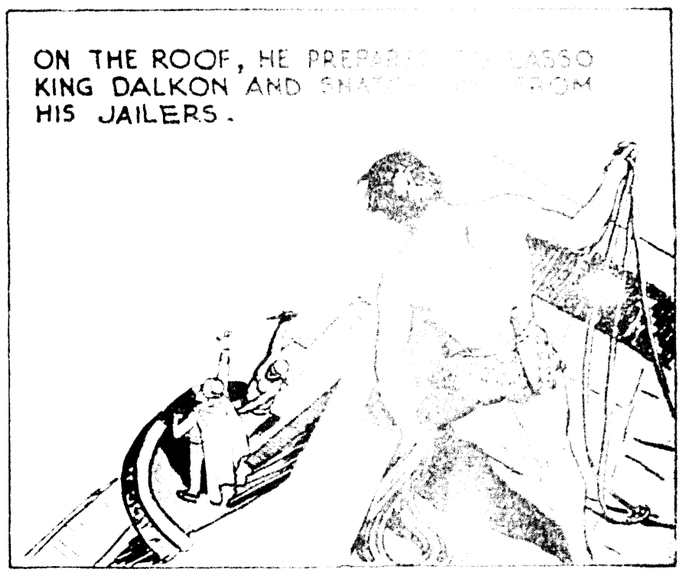


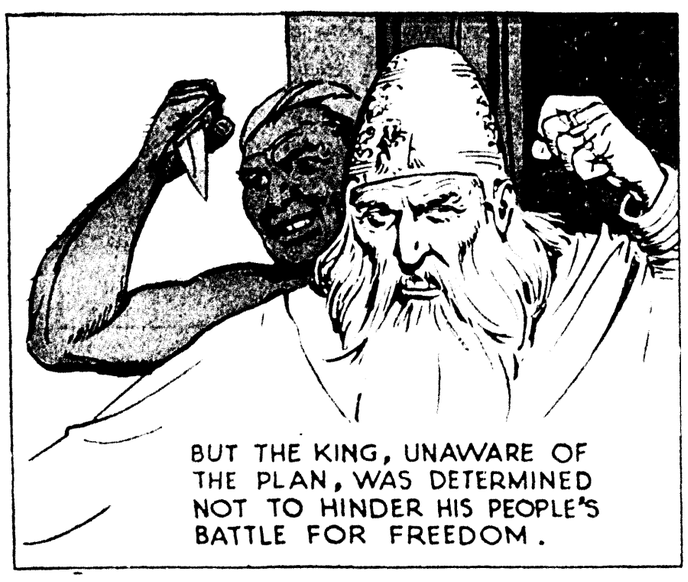


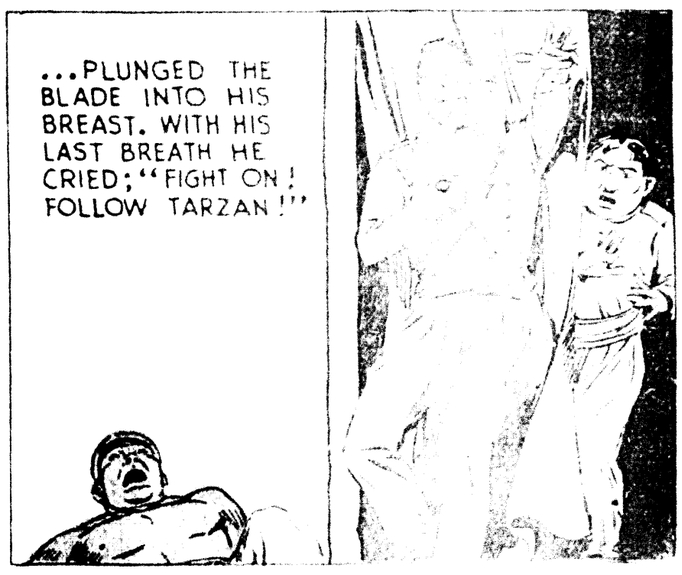


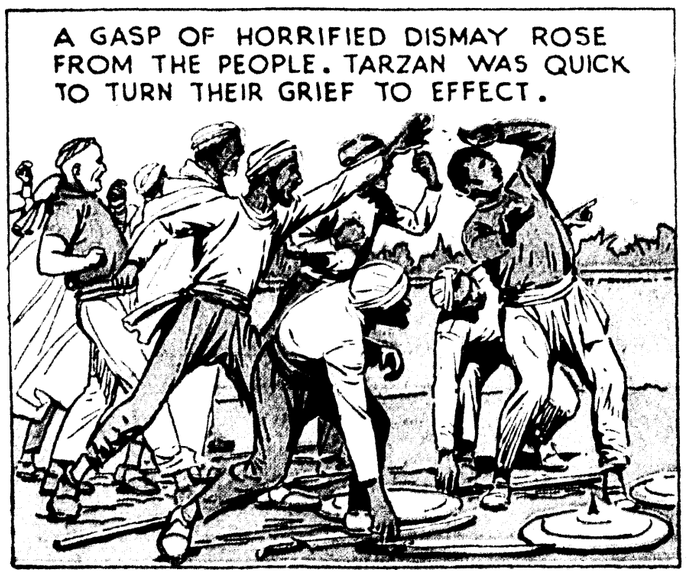


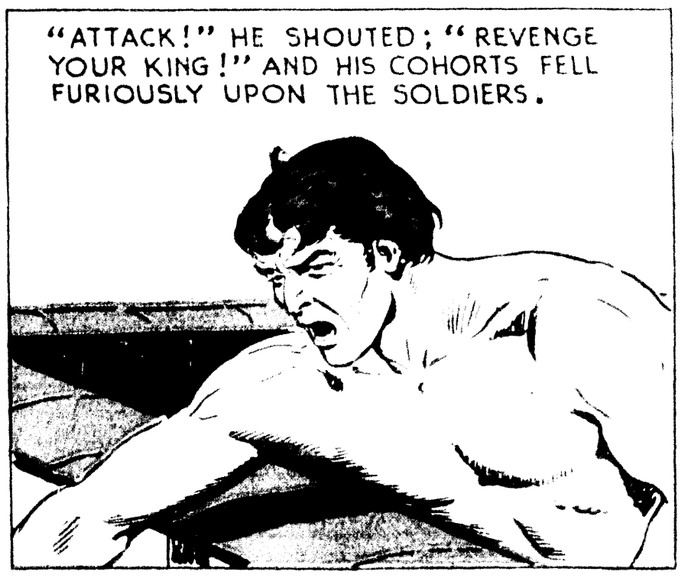


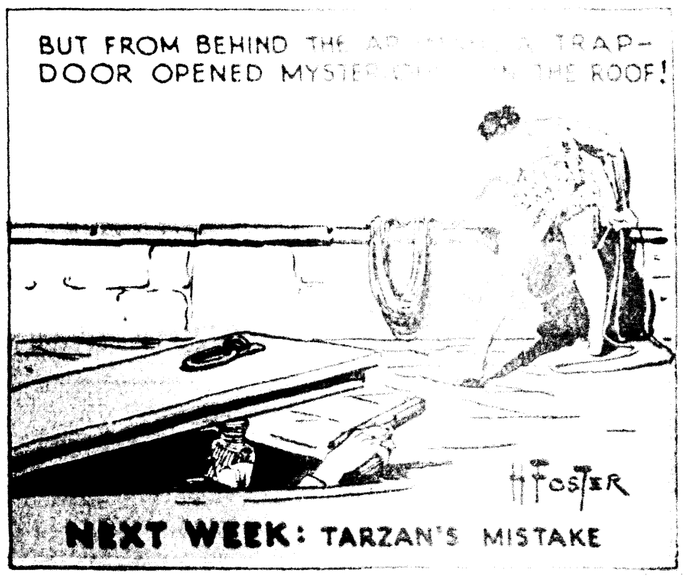












DICK TRACY

CHESTER GOULD

AFTER DRAMATICALLY PLEADING GUILTY AS CHARGED, "BALDY" STARK LEAVES HIS FATE IN THE HANDS OF THE JUDGE. THE DAY FOR PASSING SENTENCE ARRIVES AND THE JUDGE IS ABOUT TO READ HIS DECISION, WHEN DICK TRACY ASKS PERMISSION TO SAY A FEW WORDS.

I SHADOWED STARK EVERY DAY SINCE WE FIRST SPOTTED HIM! I EAVESDROPPED ON HIS SECRET MEETINGS WITH HIS LITTLE GIRL AND HER AUNT AND I KNOW THIS: "BALDY" STARK TRIED SINCERELY TO BREAK AWAY FROM THE PURPLE CROSS.

THIS SMALL SOUND FILM, SECURED SECRETLY BY MR. PATTON AND MYSELF WITH OUR MAGNIFYING EARPHONES, BEARS A STATEMENT IN STARK'S OWN VOICE THAT HE INTENDS TO GO STRAIGHT AND LEAVE THE GANG. THIS HE DECLARED TO THE GIRL'S AUNT.

AT NO TIME WERE WE ABLE TO GET CONCRETE EVIDENCE THAT STARK KILLED ANYONE, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF "SHIRTSLEEVE" KELTON.

-AND KELTON'S DEATH WAS AS SURELY A CASE OF SELF-DEFENSE AS ANY CASE CAN BE. I WAS IN THE ADJOINING ROOM AND HEARD EVERY WORD THAT WAS SAID!

STARK SHOULD PAY FOR HIS LIFE OF CRIME- HE'S BEEN A RAT- BUT I THOUGHT YOU'D LIKE TO KNOW THE COMPLETE STORY BEFORE PASSING SENTENCE.

"BALDY" STARK- RISE TO YOUR FEET.

IT IS MY DUTY AT THIS TIME TO PRONOUNCE YOUR SENTENCE. THE ELECTRIC CHAIR--IS NOT THE ANSWER IN THIS CASE, IN THE COURT'S OPINION.

YOU ARE HEREBY SENTENCED TO TWENTY YEARS AT HARD LABOR IN THE STATE PENITENTIARY.

THANK YOU JUDGE....THANK YOU--THANK YOU--THANK YOU.....

DADDY!

FLORIO!

♪♭MR. TRACY!♭♪ YOU DON'T KNOW ME BUT I KNOW YOU FROM YOUR REPUTATION! I JUST WANT TO SHAKE YOUR HAND AND CONGRATULATE YOU.

THANKS KINDLY ...BUT ARE YOU BY ANY CHANCE RELATED TO THE DEFENDANT?

HEAVENS, NO! I'M JUST A COURTROOM SPECTATOR-BUT I THOUGHT YOU DID A BEAUTIFUL JOB IN SEEING THAT JUSTICE WAS DONE.

ENRI CHRISTOPHE, tall, powerful, coal-black slave, a century and a quarter ago, roared defiance at Napoleon and led France's prosperous colony of Haiti in one of the strangest rebellions in history—a rebellion of the blacks against white power. Fifty thousand Frenchmen died in the vain effort to subdue the rebels, and when the last white alien was driven from Haiti, Christophe became king.

Once a slave, he turned to despotism, cruelly enslaving his own people. Under the lashes of his officers, they built his spacious palace, Sans Souci, on a mountain near Cap Haitien. Higher up they begar a citadel which today is a memorial to the mad despot.
